THE QUARANTINE ARSON.

THIRD DAY.

Before Judge Metcalf.

Pursuant to adjournment, the Court met punctually at 9¼ o'clock. The prisoners were both present, and a large number of their friends and sympathizers speedily filled the Court room.

The first witness was Dr. Daniel H. Bissel, who was recalled, and examined by Ex-Judge Dean.

RE-EXAMINATION OF DR. BISSELL.

Dr. Bissell testified: I saw Mr. Tompkins on the night of the 1st of September; he had on a cap different from that he usually wore; I spoke to him, but what the conversation was I can't say; to my knowledge he did not keep the crowd back, nor did he prevent the crowd from burning the Female Hospital; I think I could never have said that to his exertions was due the safety of the hospital the first night; I don't recollect going up to New-York the day after the first fire, but think I did; I have a recollection of seeing Dr. Winslow on the ferry-boat; Mr. Jacob Vanderbilt I don't know; I possibly may have said to Dr. Winslow that Mr. Tompkins had told me that the Female Hospital would have been burnt except for him; I say now, that Mr. Tompkins led the troops, and was the most active man there; I begged of Mr. Tompkins not to come further; I told him that we had controlled the fire; he refused to comply; the crowd said they were firemen and would come in; I told Mr. Tompkins there was no water there; to go elsewhere to some other building where the fire was not under control; there is not a fish-pond on the premises; there is a wash-pond near the Female Hospital, but that is sixty rods from the Small-pox Hospital; I don't know what Mr. Tompkins did, especially, after that, except to lead the men; my assistants had put out the fire at the Small-pox Hospital before Ray led the crowd; there is a brook or stream running through the hospital grounds near the St. Nicholas; the patients had not been removed from any hospital the day before the burning the first night; I don't now recollect whether a crowd was at the Women's Hospital the first night—it was set on fire that night, but was extinguished; the first night I can't say how many stevedores were on the ground; I think about seventy of them—there were eight or nine men under my orders; I believe there were six or eight boatmen belonging to Dr. Thompson; they resided in Boatmen's row I believe; we had been furnished with fire-arms last season; they got rusty and would not go; for four or five months previous to the burning, there had been no sick in the Small-pox Hospital; there are two gates to the inclosure—one on the north, the other on the south side of the wall; a family living near the north gate, had the privilege, I understand, to pass through the grounds from the first establishment of the Quarantine there; I never denied them the privilege; an old gentleman nearly a hundred years of age, who died the other day, always claimed the right to pass through the grounds; had always had it; I spoke to the Commission about this matter, and they told me still to accord the permission; there was nothing to prevent stevedores passing out of that gate if they had a key; I gave passes to all the hospital employes, signed by me as Superintendent of the grounds, except when I was absent, when Dr. Walser did so; the stevedores I did not pass; they did not belong to my department, nor were they under my supervision; I have seen them burn infected goods in the iron scow; my impression is that the scow has been burning goods about three hundred yards from the ferry landing; there are not many vessels near the shore; I cannot pretend to say how far infection extends; it is a disputed point among physicians; I have never experimented; I would not recommend that yellow-fever patients be taken to the Hospital in New-York, though my firm conviction is,no danger would result, with proper care; I do not think that the south end of the Park would be a proper place for Quarantine; the people are opposed, and would not be reconciled to it; I think in ten years from now you will find that yellow fever will not be so much dreaded; I think the location of Quarantine is the prettiest one in the port of New-York; it is naturally a healthy place; vessels and clothing are the only things that carry infection; the reason yellow fever has prevailed in the village, is that villagers go on board the ships and steal; I don't know Chandler White and Judge Rockwell, and can't say whether they went on board vessels; the Quarantine grounds are not so large as I could wish; I think they are not large enough.

Direct examination—I did not see Ray Tomkins or others connected with him using any water or attempting to get any, which counsel says was near; they insisted that they wanted to put out the fire in spite of that fact; the first night there was no general attack upon the Women's Hospital; one man was found there towards morning setting beds on fire—after the patients were there; I saw no effort of any kind made on the part of Ray Tompkins and of those with him, of any nature or of any description, to put out the fire; those men having firemen's caps and red shirts were the active men in firing the premises; the reason why I would have the grounds larger would be to have a wide space between the inhabitants and the hospitals; this I would do to yield to the prejudices of the people; if there were no hospitals near the dwellings of the people, they would not feel so much annoyed; and the reason is that the present accommodations for unloading ships are restrictd; the wharf for unloading should be a long distance from the hospitals—say half a mile or so; there is difficulty, I understand, in unloading off shore, but that is a question of mere convenience; still another reason, and the most prominent, is that cholera hospitals should be far removed from other hospitals; I think a man who has entered an infected vessel, after changing his clothes, can go where he pleases, with safety to himself and others.

To Mr. Anthon—I suppose, if you were to mat up the hair of the head with the poison or miasma, it would carry it; so with hides and skins.

To Mr. Peckham—A person ordinarily would not carry infection in his hair; I have seen persons so filthy that it is possible they might carry anything in their hair; for instance, if a man has a large quantity of bushy, heavy hair, matted, where vermin and other insects take lodgment, yellow fever and cholera might be driven to take a resting-place there; I have never known, heard or read of a case where infection has been taken in the hair.

To Mr. Anthon—I have heard of cases where physicians have been unable to decide where yellow fever has been taken and propagated; a physician cannot tell where a patient has been except from the sick man's word; infection has been carried, and is likely to be, by clothing and hair mattresses; mattresses are more likely to be infected, as the infections from patients are received upon them; the reason that the hair of mattresses is more likely to carry infection than human hair, is that dead animal matter is more likely than living to hold miasm; the hair of a man who has worked hard all day at a dirty business, and becomes wet with perspiration, would be more likely to hold it than the hair of a clean, well-washed man; this I say on general principles, as cleanliness is a great preventive of disease.

EVIDENCE OF C. C. WALLER.

Cyrene C. Waller, sworn—Am a medical man; have practiced about twelve years; am Deputy Health Officer at Quarantine; I was in the village on the second night, and at the grounds on the first night; I knew nothing of the arrangements made to fire the buildings; I saw nothing of the prisoners, either on the first or second nights; I did not see a person that I could identify engaged in firing the buildings.

Cross-examination by Mr. Anthon—I have been connected with the Quarantine establishment since May 1, 1857; previously to this I had resided in Albany for some time; I had been engaged in the practice of medicine; I did not keep a drug store there; I was not connected in business there with Dr. Thompson; I had seen cases of yellow fever before I came here, but had not attended them professionally; I performed the active duties of Health Officer; I boarded vessels that arrived; part of my duty is to inquire as to the health of vessels; this boarding has usually been done above the Narrows, except in case of vessels arriving from ports which the Commissioners of Health have declared infected, and then it has been done in the lower bay; in the fore part of the season we have boarded vessels which we afterwards sent to the lower bay; the Health Officer's boatmen resided on a portion of the Quarantine grounds called "Boatmen's Row;" I make personal examination as to the character of the sickness on board of vessels; I had boarded vessels, I presume, in the upper bay on the first of September; I had, previous to that, for some weeks, performed my regular duties as Deputy Health Officer; I was not in the village the first night; I was in the habit of passing in and out of the village myself when I pleased, but that was very seldom; I did not go to the public houses or hotels; I sometimes went to the barber's; before going out into the village, I did not always change my clothes; the sick were sometimes brought up in ship's boats and sometimes by the steamboat Cinderella, which plies between Upper and Lower Quarantine; the Cinderella usually brings up the well passengers also; the Cinderella was employed in the early part of the season in taking passengers to the City, but not recently; the sick with infectious diseases were separated from the well passengers by being placed at different ends of the boat, so that the wind would blow off the boat; I never have been on board the boat on these trips and can't say what care was used to change the position of the passengers when the boat's course had been altered; I don't know the charge made for carrying passengers; the boat has brought up, in two or three instances, the dead from the lower bay; I do not know who owns the Cinderella; when a vessel arrives which we suppose infected her hatches are ordered to be removed and windsails are inserted; she remains that way usually some days for ventilation, then certain materials are placed in the hold and in the houses on deck; these disinfecting materials are chloride of lime, sulphur and oil of vitriol; the hatches are then replaced and made as tight as possible, and are allowed to remain in that state several hours; I do not fumigate the vessels myself, and consequently cannot tell the quantity of these articles used; from one to possibly ten or fifteen may have been fumigated in one day by the same person; the person who performs this work goes into the hold of the vessels; my bargemen do the work; they lived in "Boatmen's Row," fronting on the main street of the village; the infected articles are burnt in the scow as often as we have the material to burn; she visits the vessels to collect it.

To the Judge—The scow sometimes goes down to the lower Bay.

Resuming—I have not seen the smoke from the scow blowing over the island; the articles usuully burned are infected clothing, bedding and refuse matter after the cargo is discharged—such filth as is collected in the hold; my friends have passed in and out of my house during the present season; they do not go into the inclosure to do this; I have never at any time or in any instance, practiced as a physician outside of the grounds; I do not know John McCready, one of the hands on board the Susquehanna; I do not know the number of men employed on board of that ship.

Q.—She is a dangerously infected ship, is she not? A.—I call her a bad vessel, Sir.

To Mr. Peckham—I never went into the village when I considered myself in a condition to convey infection; in 1857, I had probably a light attack of yellow fever; I do not believe it possible that a person can give another yellow fever by passing or passing, or remaining with them, no matter now many infected holes he may have been in; I might qualify that by saying if proper attention were given to cleanliness; I do not consider that any danger was incurred by the public, from the fact that my boatmen passed up and down the street on the way to their houses; I do not recollect of any complaint being made on that account; no complaint has been made to me of my going out into the village; to the best of my recollection, I have never been on board what we call an infected ship for two months.

To Mr. Anthon—I have not been on board the Susquehanna for about four months; I do not know whether I boarded the Rattler—I think I did not; Dr. Gillette probably boarded her in the Lower Bay; I boarded the steamship Columbia on Monday last; she had no sickness on board when she arrived; she came from Charleston—an infected port; a man who worked on board died yesterday morning; I do not know how long this man had been sick; I do not remember seeing him when I boarded the ship; I could not identify him; stevedores are kept within the walls because of their exposure to the poison of yellow fever; the man who fumigates the vessels is subject, for a few minutes, to the same exposure; sometimes one boatman and sometimes another performs the fumigation.

To Mr. Peckham—The reason why we do not consider the boatmen so much exposed to danger as the stevedores is, that the latter work in the holds, and handle infected cargoes all day; I have never heard or knew of the bargemen communicating the fever.

To Mr. Anthon—One of the boatmen or bargemen is named George Randolph; he lives, I am informed, in the same house with his mother; I have heard, but do not know, that Mrs. Randolph is sick now with yellow fever; Randolph told me that the physician who attended his mother had not yet pronounced it yellow fever: Dr. Harcourt is the attending physician, I have heard.

To Mr. Peckham—Mrs. Randolph lives, I believe, in what is called the infected district.

EVIDENCE OF DAVID M'LYMAN.

David McLyman, sworn—I am a bargeman, and resided, at the time of the fire, in "Boatmen's Row;" I have been bargeman for four years on the 4th of next April; I was towing the iron scow in when the fire broke out; I saw both the prisoners on the grounds after I reached them; the wooden shanty was nearly burned down then—all but the eastern end of it; I do not know whether the prisoners were engaged in the burning; heard neither of the prisoners converse on the subject then nor since; I have had charge of the iron scow since she first was brought here—near two years, I believe; I have had assistance, and have hired a man to row in the Doctor's boat in my place; I have had an assistant in the scow; have two at present; sometimes I took the scow off to the vessel, and if there was but little stuff I brought itashore in a small boat, unless it were bedding, when I took the scow for it; the stuff is old clothes and rubbish; I set fire to this stuff on the scow; she was placed always on the anchorage; the Susquehanna's stuff was burned in the Lower Bay; the scow once parted her moorings, and drifted off towards Robins' Reef; she never was up opposite New-Brighton; I sometimes stay on board when the stuff is burning—smoke won't hurt anybody; I might have had a slight attack of yellow fever, but I don't think it was; I called it a cold, and I cured myself; Kramer sickened about the 4th of July; he had been employed with me on the scow up to the time of his death, excepting for four months last Winter, since the time I have had charge of the scow; I saw Kramer's wife the afternoon before she died; she was as well as could be; she died in child-birth; I have been to Kramer's house; I know a feather bed has never been taken to his house from the scow; there sometimes was among the stuff good clothing, the only objection to which was that it had been worn by persons who had died or been sick of yellow fever; I never knew of a single feather bed being burnt in the scow; pillows have been, and mattresses and straw beds; during this time I would go about the village when I wanted to see my friends; I generally went home and washed and changed my clothes if I thought I was dirty enough; I have had charge of the sick boat with the other bargemen, and have brought ashore the sick and the dead; the pantaloons I now have on I have worn on board of the scow; I am not afraid to handle a sick person, and have taken them in my arms to place them on board my boat; after doing this I have gone about among the villagers as usual; I was at the primary meeting at the Assembly Rooms; I might have worked on the scow the day before that, but don't think I had that day; I had no coat on the night of the meeting; I had changed my clothes all but my boots; I walked with the stevedores over to the meeting, at Houseman's, at the boss stevedore's request; we went out of the back gate; we knocked at the gate, and the girl from Mrs. Fountain's came and opened it; I don't think there were more than 15 or 20 stevedores went out of the gate; Dr. Thompson did not go ont of the gate with us, nor did he give us directions what to do at the meeting; I have not been to the City on the same days that I have been engaged on the scow; I had a pass to go out of the gate; a general pass to go in and out when I chose.

At this point the cross-examination was suspended, and a recess of an hour was taken.

Cross-examination of David McLyman resumed—I never knew of passes having been sold by parties in side of Quarantine; have heard rumors to that effect outside; (objected to as regards rumors;) I burn the infected articles some 600 yards from the shore, sometimes closer, according to the wind; sometimes I have burned articles, when the wind was blowing off shore, at about 600 feet distance; I have always told my men to keep clear of the ferry-boat; I have seen articles drifting in the water; don't know whether it came from the shipping or from Castle Garden; rather think it comes from the vessels at Castle Garden, as I have never seen any thrown overboard from the vessels at Quarantine; I have not done any fumigating of vessels for the past two months; I have done that sort of work for years with the other boatmen; we always go into the parts of the vessel that we suppose most infected; after I have done this work I go among the citizens in the evening, frequently with the same clothing on; sometimes we use a barrel of lime in fumigating a ship; in the ordinary class of vessels—from eight hundred to one thousand tons—we use some twenty or thirty plates of lime; we pour sulphuric acid upon that in order to cause the vapor; I have fumigated as many as six or eight vessels in one day myself; for the last two months the rest of the men have been in the daily habit of fumigating vessels at the Upper Quarantine, for the purpose of taking the disease out if there be any there; I know John McCready; he was employed on board the Susquehanna; I don't know whether he lives in Tompkinsville or down here; I believe he lives on the Island; I have seen him inside Quarantine; I don't know how often he visited his family; I think he was a stevedore on the Susquehanna.

To Mr. Peckham—The vessels at the Upper Quarantine are all fumigated, whether disease exists on board or not; I have always for years been in the habit, after fumigating a vessel, of going to my house in the village; I never heard a complaint on that score against me; all the boatmen, Custom-House and Health officers go to the City when they want to.

The cross-examination of Dr. Thompson, postponed from Thursday, was here resumed by Judge Dean.

EXAMINATION OF DR. THOMPSON RESUMED.

The stevedores give a bond—most of them—when employed; it is a matter of option with the Health Officer; the bond in effect provides that they shall remain in Quarantine all the time employed, and shall not leave until five days have elapsed from the time they have ceased working; this is done that no chance of taking the fever may be had; the period of yellow-fever incubation is fiv days.

Q.—Why do you not require this bond of all,as well as a part? A.—Because I did not think it necessary; I bonded them all the first part of the season; I understood that they were liable for misdemeanor if they infringed the regulation; I so understood this at the time I permitted the stevedores to go to New-Brighton; I have known Houseman for four years; I believe he resides in Brooklyn; permitted him to go with the men that the conditions of their absence might be complied with; I don't remember how these stevedores were dressed at the caucus; some of them wore the same kind of clothing they wear when they are discharging vessels; I don't know where these men live; I don't know if Houseman voted at the meeting; I supposed those men went out of the front gate; my impression is, as I stated yesterday, that I spoke to the gate-keeper to let Mr. Houseman's men out; McLyman was at the meeting; I have heard that McLyman has had a touch of yellow fever since that night, but not within five days from that time; McLyman had no special permit for that night; he and all the boatmen, have general permits; permission is given the boatmen, because I have reason to believe they would not go out in an unfit condition, as the stevedores might, who are constantly at work among infected cargoes; the statute regulation is that no party shall leave Quarantine without authority, which is given at the discretion of the Health Officer; I know Geo. W. Daily; he has been engaged at Quarantine since I have been Health Officer; I became acquainted with him at Albany, when he was door-keeper, I believe, of the Senate; I think that was the first Winter that I held my office; he had a sore eye in Albany, and came to my office for a prescription; he had only one eye then, and I remembered him on that account: Daily was employed in 1856, with a steamboat, to tow vessels off shore; the season was a very sickly one, and I employed him for that and kindred service; he did not own a boat, but he had a friend who did; I don't know what his business was before; that work he performed well.

This line of interrogatory was indulged in for some time, when

Mr. Peckham asked the object of such testimony.

Judge Metcalf did not see its relevancy.

Dr. Thompson said he would cheerfully answer any questions pertinent to the matter in issue.

Witness, resuming—Daily has no Quarantine pass; he had one, but it has been revoked; I gave orders to the gate-keeper some time this season to revoke that pass; I knew that Daily was in constant intercourse with the villagers during this time; this last year Daily was not in my employ; to my knowledge Daily did not go in and out of the gate when he pleased; I gave permission to many of the citizens of the Island to come in and out; captains of vessels had permission; those who had business there were permitted to come in; Mr. Daily had business with me in the year 1857.

Q.—What was the nature of the business?

Mr. Peckham objected to the time being occupied with such inquiries

Judge Metcalf did not see the relevancy of the matter to the issue; counsel had drawn out the fact that persons were permitted inside without having business.

Judge Dean wished to show the loose way in which Quarantine regulations had been enforced.

Witness, resuming—Mr. Cunningham is one of my boatmen; he, with the others, fumigates vessels; one of the regulations is that they shall not go out into the village without changing their clothing; a compliance with that regulation is expected of them, and I have reason to believe they comply; the Health Officer receives fees for the performance of certain duties; he receives no fees specifically for watching the boatmen change their clothing; I have never prevented the beatmen leaving the Quarantine premises for the purpose of going to their homes; a Board of Health was organized in the village in 1856 and in this year; a barricade was erected by them before the gate; I don't know who tore it down; my opinion is that it should have been torn down; I never inquired who did it; did not pay the expense of having it torn down; did not pay Daily or allow him to take pay from any funds belonging to me to liquidate such expense.

Q.—Were stevedores and others employed in Quarantine in the constant habit of going out? A.—No; in reference to 1856 it was a very difficult matter to keep them inside; the wall around the quarantine is so low it can be easily scaled; as to my means of knowing how much they went out, they are very limited; there was no police, and therefore we had to do the best we could; the establishment in that respect is and has been very deficient.

Q.—You have a regular police? A.—The Harbor Police, whose duty it is to prevent communication with vessels in Quarantine.

Q.—Had you no police to prevent the stevedores from communicating with the people, and was there any more danger in the one case than in the other? A.—The stevedores were not allowed, by regulations, to leave the ground without changing their clothing; there was no exception to the rule; their clothing was kept in the old washhouse where the men had their quarters and slept, also in a shanty next to the St. Nicholas, on the hill.

Q.—Have vessels been unloaded at the Quarantine wharves? A.—Yes; vessels with molasses, logwood, &c.; all vessels arriving without sickness on board have been permitted to discharge their cargoes there by steam; it commenced this Summer.

Q.—Has that been done before, within a quarter of a century? A.—I don't know as it was done before; I think I inaugurated it; the object was to facilitate the discharge of cargoes, and thus lessen the accumulation of vessels above the Narrows, and between the shores of the two islands.

Q.—Who owns the power used for hoisting out cargoes? A.—I don't know; the engine is used by the boss stevedores, Messrs. Brown, Dean and Houseman.

Q.—Are they from Albany? A.—No, Sir. (Mr. Peckham objected to such questions.)

Q.—Do these men have a permit from you, and where do they live? A.—Yes, Sir; they live in Brooklyn; I have heard that the engineer who ran the engine has been sick of yellow fever; I have no doubt that persons directly employed in discharging cargoes are liable to be taken sick; one object of this discharge of cargoes is to ventilate them.

Q.—Have you given permits to any other parties? A.—I selected three persons to attend to the duties of stevedores, who employ the stevedores; I have control of them so far as sanitary regulations are concerned; no further, and no other interest in the matter.

Q.—Why do you have these vessels discharged at the Quarantine wharf by steam? A.—Because it can be done with greater dispatch by steam; heretofore they have been discharged by hand power; portions of the cargoes have been sent to the City.

Q.—If infection is in the cargo when on board the vessel, will it not remain in it after it is discharged? A.—The infection is thrown off by exposure to the air, such as sugar and molasses cargoes, in its passage from Quarantine to the City; the theory is, that in its passage it has been rid of its infection, and experience has shown that the theory is correct; no instance has been known where infection has arisen from these cargoes thus lightered.

Q.—Have you known any lighterman die who have been employed in carrying goods to the City? A.—Yes; this year, and also in 1856; what I mean to say is that if there is, any danger in discharging, the danger is here; I have known sometimes three, sometimes one, vessel to lie at the Quarantine dock discharging at one time; the distance of the Quarantine dock from the ferry dock is about an eighth of a mile—perhaps less; the ferry-boat from New-York passes very near the dock; there is a large number passing each way every hour; to,unload one of these vessels in the city there would be danger of infecting the neighborhood; the danger is first to those unleading, and second of infecting the locality.

Q.—Did the Rattler lie at that dock? A.—I think she was discharged in the stream; I am certain she was; when she came down from the City she landed at the Government wharf, where she remained about ten days; it is my duty to assign the place for these vessels; I knew that Mayor Tiemann had sent her away; I did not know he had threatened to scuttle her at the dock; I understood two or three sickened on board of her; in addition to the stevedores there are lightermen engaged, who are also licensed; I cannot give the number or the names; the lightering has been done the same as the stevedores' business, only one man has the control; his name is Herman Boyer; I have licensed none but him; they have been placed in quarantine; Mr. Littlejohn has no connection with Quarantine whatever, or with its business.

Q.—What is Mr. Littlejohn's business? A.—I will answer that question if the Judge thinks it a proper one.

Ruled out as impertinent.

Q.—Dr., do you consider the present Quarantine a proper Quarantine? A.—No, Sir; I have by my words and acts, advocated its removal since 1856; I consider it too near the shores of both islands; the danger, as I have said, I consider is the presence of infected vessels lying at anchor in great numbers above the Narrows, and between the shores of the two islands; I made a report to the Commissioners of Health advocating the bringing of vessels to in the Lower Bay to prevent so many congregating here; my only object in making such recommendation was for the purpose of lessening the danger growing out of the accumulation of vessels above the Narrows.

Q.—Are the Quarantine grounds extensive enough? A.—With buildings properly located it might do; but the anchorage is too small; some vessels have been obliged to lie outside the anchorage on account of the damage to them in case of a storm; in all diseases except cholera, the grounds might be made easily safe; hospitals for cholera should be well isolated from buildings occupied by persons sick of other diseases.

Q.—Don't the fact that the place around the Quarantine inclosure which is surrounded by population, prevent extending the grounds? A.—Yes; it stands in the way of extension, and it increases the danger in relation to cholera, provided they keep cholera patients inside; the danger would be increased as the population increases; in 1856, the statistics of the Hospital show that we received into the Marine Hospital a greater influx of yellow fever, (and of yellow-fever vessels arriving,) than was ever known before by 75 per cent.: the regulations and precedents which had been adopted before that period for the proper care of the sick were accordingly found to be wholly inadequate, and I was obliged to block out an entirely new régime; I found it necessary to send out of the Quarantine anchorage, below the Narrows, vessels which I supposed to be particularly infected, and therefore dangerous to have lie between the shores of the Islands; the influx this year over that of 1856 has been at least thirty-three per cent.; it is, therefore, my opinion that it is unsafe for the port at large, and especially for this Island, to allow infected vessels to be anchored above the Narrows, and between the shores of Long Island and Staten Island.

Q.—(By Peckham.)—Do you mean by this all vessels that come here with sickness on board, or not? A.—I mean vessels coming from yellow-fever ports, where the disease is epidemic; it is unsafe for such to be allowed to anchor above the Narrows in any considerable number.

Q.—What would be the effect of having a vessel of this kind wrecked on the shore? A.—I think it would be liable to infect the locality, and cause a spread of the disease to the people along shore; my opinion is that yellow fever is not contagious, but is infectious; that is to say, if the poison falls in a place where the atmosphere is such as to generate or propagate it, then the locality becomes infected, and persons visiting the same are likely to contract yellow fever.

Q.—Do you know the steamboat Cinderella, and who owns her? A.—Yes; I do not know who owns her; she has been used for transhipping passengers, visiting vessels in the Lower Bay, and for towing; she has been used by my permission; I gave permission to Joseph Nelson; several other boats have occasionally been employed; the Cinderella is steadily employed; it is optional with parties whether they employ the Cinderella or not; she is devoted to Quarantine service and remains in Quarantine for that purpose, doing nothing else; if other tugs tow vessels by hawser they do not become subject to Quarantine; this is often done without their being detained; the Cinderella has been employed in carrying passengers to New-York, when she was in condition, and freed from infection, sometimes when she has not been employed in such service that made it improper to do so; she has been permitted to carry passengers to town the same day that she has towed an infected vessel, but there is no danger in doing so, in my opinion; she gets her coal and water at the City, but remains no longer there than necessary for such purpose; she sometimes brings sick persons and passengers from infected vessels from the lower Bay, and then she goes to the City, if necessary; but her decks are always scrubbed and limed beforehand; she is the only conveyance we have; I think liming and scrubbing the decks are a sufficient guaranty against infection; she never has any material from infected vessels placed in her hold; vessels from Turk's Island with salt are detained for a few days for observation; the forecastle and cabin of such vessels may be fumigated, but not the cargo.

Q.—Are vessels, loaded with coal, from the British Province, ever detained? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Is the Cinderella required to have permission to discharge passengers? A.—Yes, Sir; permits have been given when passengers were ready to go; she has permission to carry up passengers whose quarantine is at an end; I have no control over the charges made; there would be more danger in their going up on the ferry boats, as, while they would there find ventilation, it would be with other passengers; the parties interested in transhipping passengers have their choice whether to employ the Cinderella or not; they may employ their own tug, or the Cinderella; if they send their own tug, she is not subject to Quarantine, if they are taken from the Quarantine wharf.

Q.—Is there any objection to these passengers walking out of the gate and taking the ferry boat? A.—Only such as I have stated; I have avoided sending them out on account of complaints of the people outside; I have done this in fulfillment of my understanding with Dr. Mundy, that passengers should not be sent out of the gate in opposition to the wishes of the Health authorities; I have offered, if the Health authorities would furnish me the means of transit between the Island and New-York, that not a sailor or passenger should go out of the gate and on the ferry boat; the patients are brought up on the deck of the Cinderella, properly protected by an awning; when the weather is pleasant this is the proper place for them; I was on the Quarantine ground on the 1st of September, and used my efforts to prevent the burning

Q.—Did you do anything to save the patients in Quarantine? A.—No. Except one—my wife.

Q.—Was she a Quarantine patient? A.—She was a patient in Quarantine. My duties are to look after all the affairs pertaining to Quarantine; not to look after the hospitals; I have examined the patients in the hospitals, probably once a month; I visit the hospitals to examine the patients, when I have any doubts as to the character of the disease, and it is expressly stated in the statute, that I am not permitted to be there for any other purpose; it is the duty of the Health Officer to reside within the grounds, and I have resided there when I had a dwelling to live in; I have not boarded away this Summer.

Q.—How does a physician determine in his own mind as to the nature of the disease? A.—By personal inspection as to character of the symptoms and by the agency of others; I do not know the exact number admitted during the Summer; during the Summer season I do not board vessels much, my other duties connected with the office do not afford me the time; under the statute I am allowed a deputy; I did not say that I would bring the Staten Islanders into the traces or starve them out; I never made use of any such expression; never had any such idea; if vessels arrives from an infected port with passengers, they are detained five days, and then are allowed to proceed—they have been kept at the St. Nicholas; if sickness breaks out they are detained, and the rest proceed; vessels arriving from infected ports, without sickness on board, where there has been no sickness in the port of departure, or on the voyage, are detained for ventilation in the Lower Bay for nine days; they are then permitted to come to the Upper Quarantine anchorage and discharge their cargoes; in ten days from the discharge of their cargoes, they are permitted to proceed to New-York or Brooklyn, provided that no sickness shall occur on such vessel from the time of her arrival to the time that she has been permitted to proceed; the rule is different in regard to vessels having sickness in their port of departure, or on their passage, or on their arrival; such vessels are detained at the lower anchorage for a period of fifteen days with wind-sails inserted in their hatches and trimmed to the wind; they are then permitted to proceed to the upper anchorage and discharge their cargo, and if no sickness appears on board of them in connection with their crews or stevedores, they are permitted to proceed to the City in fifteen days; that is the whole story.

Q.—Are not these rules sometimes departed from, and facilities used to get vessels to the City earlier? A.—In two cases only: 1st, when a vessel arrives in a leaky condition; and, 2d, when the vessel, after being discharged, desires to proceed to some place or port remote from the cities of New-York, Brooklyn or Jersey City, and in no other instances have there been exceptions to my knowledge; it is the duty of the Mayor and Commissioners of Health, with the Health Officer, to lessen the Quarantine detention whenever, in their judgment, it can be done safely to the public health; the statute gives this right, and prescribes this duty.

Q.—When was the iron scow obtained? A.—Last year; there was not an understanding that the infected materials should be burned in the lower bay; I received a communication, sent to the Mayor, from the people of New-Brighton, complaining that she had been in practical operation in front of New-Brighton dwellings and in close proximity thereto.

Q.—What did you say to that? A.—I made a response to that whole matter; I stated that the scow, to my knowledge and belief, had never been outside the Quarantine anchorage, except in the lower bay, but once when she broke her cable; in that report I expressly denied that the complaint was true; I never had an opinion that it was improper to burn these materials within the Quarantine anchorage; it would not be unsafe, in my opinion, to the public health to burn them in the East River; it might be offensive.

At this point the examination of witnesses was discontinued and the case was adjourned to Thursday next at 10 o'clock.

The Military Encampment.

The Eighth Regiment had yesterday pretty much recovered from the drenching of Wednesday night, and, with the exception of a slight cold which some few contracted by being wet, they were all in good spirits. The day was delightful, and was mostly employed in putting up the new Sibley tents with which they have been furnished. Comfortable floors have been laid in most of them, and, when the weather becomes cold enough to require it, fires can be made in the tents. The troops are on the most friendly terms with the neighbors, all rumors to the contrary notwithstanding. Col. Lyon had been offered a neat cottage for his head-quarters, and a barn for the officers' horses. If necessary, they could now remain comfortably till Spring.

Capt. Varian's troop is in excellent condition, and do duty as the police of the camp. Their four polished mountain howitzers look formidable, placed in position, and ready for instant action. They are mounted on a prairie-carriage, and each carry a canister-charge of 148 musket-balls, and can be discharged six times a minute—the four being equal to 24 discharges, throwing an aggregate of nearly 4,000 shots per minute. The force is so disposed every night at dark that, in case of alarm, every gun can be manned in two minutes from the sound of the bugle, without previous warning. The magazine is well provided, and is designated by a red flag.

Capt. Samuel Gregory was the officer of the day, and Lieut. W. S. Carr officer of the Guard. There is a camp drill every morning at 6; a battalion drill at 9; and a full-dress parade at 5 P. M. The Commissary's deartment gives entire satisfaction, the living, with the aid of one of the best cooks in the country, being excellent. In the Quarantine proper nothing particular occurred yesterday, the absurd threats to prevent the burial of the dead not being carried out. A detachment of troops were in readiness to protect the sexton if any resistance had been offered. The ten police remain upon the ground, keeping a bright look-out for incendiaries. The nights are so cool that they require warm clothing to cover them in their tents.

A Remonstrance from Staten Island.

The following remonstrance is circulating for signatures among the residents of Richmond County:

To His Excellency John A. King, Governor of the State of New-York:

The memorial of the subscribers, citizens and residents of Richmond County, respectfully represents:

That your memorialists are unanimous in deprecating the deplorable event which is the subject of the proclamation recently issued by your Excellency, declaring this County in a state of insurrection; that your memorialists are and always have been well known as supporters of law and order; and are, and at all times have been ready to maintain the laws of the State, and the authority of the Government; but they beg respectfully to assure your Excellency that, after diligent inquiry, they can find no occasion for their coöperation with, nor any opening where their services or assistance can be rendered available to the constituted authorities.

That, as your memorialists admit, on the evening of Wednesday, the 1st September, a considerable number of persons broke through the wall of the Quarantine establishment, and after removing the sick, did set fire to several of the buildings within the inclosure; and again on the evening of Thursday, the 2d of September, a similar number of persons, after removing the sick, did set fire to the remaining buildings belonging to the establishment, including several dwelling-houses after the latter had been vacated by the inmates.

But your memorialists further represent to your Excellency that they are informed or advised and truly believe as bearing upon the circumstances connected with this lamentable outbreak:

In the first place that with the exception of two individuals who it is said exhibited pistols in self-defence, the attacking party was wholly unarmed, and without weapons of any description, offensive or defensive; as verified by the statements of disinterested and reliable parties.

2. That the bed-ridden patients, about fourteen in number, were so removed as aforesaid, with the utmost care and tenderness, on the very beds which they occupied in the Hospitals, without injury and without, in any individual case, aggravating in the slightest degree the particular diseases under which they labored, according to the testimony of the medical attendants themselves.

3. That the patients were not exposed to any inclemency of the weather, which was clear and of a mild temperature, the thermometer ranging from 70° to 86° during the first three days of the month.

4. That for the greater part of two days the patients were almost exclusively supplied with nourishing food by the families in the neighborhood of the Quarantine; and that the use of suitable buildings was repeatedly tendered for the reception of the [illegible] declined by the attending physicians on the ground that the patients were better situated where and as they then were.

5. That no act of personal violence whatever was committed by any one of the individuals of whom the attacking party was composed; that no more force was used in any case than was just necessary to prevent or render harmless the discharge of fire-arms by the defenders of the premises; and that, consequently, it is necessary for your memorialists to repel the charge of aiding and abetting in, or approving of acts of murder which your Excellency, on insufficient authority, has alleged against them in common with their fellow-citizens throughout the county.

6. That the authorities of the County are expressly and stringently debarred by law from the exercise, as of right, of any power or authority within the precincts of the Quarantine establishment; and that within these limits the Sheriff of the County himself cannot perform any act whatever by virtue of his office; and even in defence of the premises, and with the consent of the Health Officer, he can only act in the capacity of a private citizen.

7. That the occurrence of the sad events on the 1st and 2d of September, as above set forth, were as wholly unexpected by the inhabitants of the County at large as they were by your memorialists, who were completely taken by surprise, and are not, therefore, justly censurable for not having in anticipation adopted those measures of precaution which were especially and exclusively within the scope of the authority of the Quarantine officials, and by them so singularly and unaccountably omitted.

Your memorialists do not present or urge these considerations as in extenuation or palliation of the acts complained of, but simply to present the case in its true dimensions; but they cannot refrain from soliciting the attention of your Excellency to the undoubted fact, that assuming and admitting the destruction of the Quarantine establishment to have been predetermined upon, the efforts of the mob were confined to that single object. Without any threats of or attempts at personal violence; without any wanton injury to property when the proposed object was attained, the mob quietly dispersed, and the public peace has not since been disturbed; and notwithstanding the reiterated charge of barbarous and inhuman conduct, it does not appear that any one has been injured to the extent of a single hair of a man's head.

Your memorialists, in conclusion, beg further respectfully to represent to your Excellency, that with the exception of the occurrences above recorded, the County of Richmond has been and continues to be one of the most peaceful and orderly in the State. They are advised and believe that the execution of any legal process, civil or criminal, has never been prevented in this County, and that the constituted authorities have never at any time been obstructed in the execution of their duties.

And inasmuch as the occurrence of a riot in the Sixth Ward would not afford just cause for disfranchising the City of New-York, so the occurrence of an outbreak in the small village of Tompkinsville, does not appear to furnish sufficient grounds for even temporarily disfranchising the whole County of Richmond; and your memorialists, therefore, on behalf of themselves and their fellow citizens, respectfully solicit your Excellency forthwith to rescind or withdraw the above-cited proclamation.

As an additional motive for retiring the troops, your memorialists beg respectfully to represent to your Excellency that they are informed that the commander has stationed them, not at Quarantine, but at New-Brighton; that he has placed sentinels to prevent the use of public streets and thoroughfares by the resident citizens; and has publicly, and on many occasions, declared that the whole Island is under martial law, that he has the right to enter private premises on any part of the Island, and take supplies for his men by force, and that no process can be issued or executed, or any Courts held for the trial of causes, excepting by his authority and under his jurisdiction. These pretensions are so manifestly at variance with the terms of the proclamation that, if attempted to be enforced, there is reason to apprehend that they will be resisted, and that consequences may result which all good citizens must be desirous to avert.

Commissioners of Health.

The Board met shortly after 12 o'clock, yesterday, all the Commissioners present except Alderman Clancy.

Permission was granted to the owners of the following vessels to bring them up to the City: The Kate Stewart, the brig C. D. Carver, the Daniel Webster, the schooner Mary, from Charleston, and the Spanish brig Bonita, from Jamaica. An application from the brig Mariana, from Trinidad, Cuba, for permission to come up to the City immediately was denied. She had lost five men on the voyage.

Permission was granted to the owners of the brig Handy King, from Havana, to take their vessel to Hunter's Point for repairs on Monday.

A report from the Health Officer was read recommending that the schooner Satterlee, from Charleston, be permitted to come up to Hunter's Point next Monday. So ordered.

Dr. Thompson reported that no new cases of sickness had broken out on the vessels at Quarantine since the preceding day. With regard to the man Ready, who died in this City as previously stated, he said that his name was not on the list of stevedores at Quarantine, and that therefore he could not have been employed there. Dr. Thompson denied the statement in some of the morning papers that fifty policemen accompanied him to the Court at Staten Island the day before. He went with one friend only to the Court, and the crowd did not molest him even with a jest or jeer.

Dr. Miller moved that the steamers Florida and Montgomery, from Savannah, be permitted to come up to the City immediately, and it was so ordered.

An application for permission for the J. H. Flanner to come up was laid over,

Permission was granted for the brig Vulcan to come up on the 22d inst., if there is no sickness on board of her then, and to the brig Onward to come up on the 19th.

The City Inspector presented a resolution authorizing and directing the City Inspector to remove the pigs kept on the premises below Eighty-sixth-street, which had been complained of as a nuisance. The resolution was adopted.

The same Commissioner offered a resolution directing that the rotten potatoes on the Anna Cole, now lying at the foot of Vesey-street, North River, be removed forthwith,—the City Inspector to carry out the order. This resolution was adopted.

The Board adjourned to 12 o'clock to-day.

End of the Pomological Convention.

The biennial Pomological Convention, which has been in session for three days past at Mozart Hall, came to an end Thursday afternoon. The proceedings were mainly of interest to fruit-growers. The Hon. Marshall P. Wilder, of Massachusetts, has presided during the session, and has added largely from his own experience to the information drawn out in the discussions. The proceedings, yesterday, consisted of debates on revised lists of Fruits. A paper on the Fruits of the South, was read by Mr. Redmond, of South Carolina, who desired to correct the impression which has prevailed at the North, that good Apples could not be raised at the South. He spoke of the superior flavor and fine appearance of many of the Southern apples, when grown under well-directed culture,—showed their freedom from disease, and gave a list of the varieties particularly suited to the Southern climate. The Pear, he said, was particularly at home in the South, and its culture is rapidly increasing,—but nowhere in this country does the Peach flourish in such profusion and attain the perfection that it does in the South, growing almost spontaneously, and producing during some four months of the year.

In the afternoon the Convention discussed the the culture of Raspberries, Currants and Peaches. Many of the varieties of Currant, contained in the Society's published list, and recommended as worthy of general cultivation, were objected to by Western and Southern cultivators as unsuited to their regions. They claimed that such should be rejected. A very animated discussion followed, upon this question, but it was finally decided inexpedient to alter the list materially at present, the ultimate design being to publish catalogues suited to different localities of the country. The subject was left in the hands of a Committee to report upon at a future meeting of the Society.

After the naming of several Committees by the Chair, to take into consideration the subject of "Synonyms of Fruits," and to receive and pass judgment upon anything new coming out in the interval between this and the next meeting, votes of thanks were successively tendered to the President and Secretary of the Society, and to the New-York Horticultural Society, and the Agricultural and Horticultural Press and reporters, and then the Convention adjourned, to meet in Philadelphia in the year 1860, at such time and place as the President may designate.

The show of fine fruit, spread out on the long tables of the Hall, was excellent yesterday; the exhibitors having completed their contributions. The number of visitors was small, the weather being decidedly unfavorable, but the few who went to see came away abundantly satisfied. The features of the exhibition were the Pears and Apples. Never before has there been a catalogue in the City so rich in splendid qualities of these fruits. Of grapes there was an inferior assortment. The Southern States exceeded the usual average of the North in the show of fine varieties, and Mr. Redmond's boast of the Southern capability for fruit-growing was fairly justified. We understand that a large part of the fruits exhibited here will be removed to the Fair of the American Institute, where they will remain until the close of the exhibition.

OUR FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.

LONDON.

The Royal Visit to Prussia—The Reigning King—Prince Frederick William—The Speech of Persigny—The New India Government—Cardinal Wiseman in Ireland—Lord Eglinton's Refusal to Dine with him—Revival of Sectarianism.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Friday, Sept 3 1858.

The Queen returned on the 31st ultimo from her visit to her daughter, the Princess FREDERICK WILLIAM, of Prussia. Throughout her Majesty's tour in Germany she was everywhere greeted with hearty expressions of respect and good will. The Prussians are weary and ashamed of the pitiful position to which their country has been politically reduced of recent years, owing to the complete ascendency of absolutist views in the councils of the King. No sovereign ever commenced his reign under happier or more hopeful auspices. A great deal of preparatory work had been done during the lifetime of his father; and the elevated sentiments and aspirations said to be cherished by his successor, filled men's minds with sanguine anticipations of progress and development. Year after year rolled by, however, and the King still dreamed, and discussed, and doubted, what the form should be of the free institutions he was to confer upon his country. People gradually lost confidence in his sincerity; yet every now and then he indulged in certain vaguely oracular reiterations of his splendid promises of comprehensive and permanent constitutionalism. The storm of 1848 came and found him still dreaming. In the paroxysm of our panic everything the mob of Berlin shouted for was then hastily granted; and carried away at last by the enthusiasm of the hour, his Majesty caused himself to be proclaimed Emperor of Germany. A few months elapsed, and the insidious influence of Russia had thoroughly prevailed over the unstable mind of the King. Terror-stricken lest the example of France should be followed in Germany, and that the concessions of representative power he had made, would be used for the speedy overthrow of monarchy, he threw himself unreservedly into the arms of Russia, and under the guarantee of military support in all emergencies, he set about the gradual retractation of all that he had sworn to hold inviolate. His pretentious title of Emperor was silently dropped, and stealthily, but steadily, every popular right and franchise was curtailed and abridged, till nothing has been left of the constitutional system but the shadow and the name. The depth of national humiliation was not reached till the Crimean war saw Prussian diplomacy playing the part of valet to that of the Czar; while the sword of Germany remained undrawn, contrary to the earnest reclamations of her people.

The Chevalier BUNSEN, who had long filled the post of Minister at our Court, was nearly the last of the Liberals permitted to retain any employment; and, in consequence of the predilection he had shown during the negotiations of 1853 for the cause of the Western Powers, he was at length compelled to retire. Since then the darkness of despondency has seemed to settle down over Northern Germany, broken only by occasional whisperings of hope that in a new reign the long deferred day of deliverance might come. The illness of the King renders it now all but certain that the powers of Government must speedily devolve to his brother, the Crown Prince, whose eldest son married in January last the eldest daughter of Queen VICTORIA. And hence it is that everything which suggests the idea of intimacy and affection between the two families thus recently united is regarded with peculiar interest by our German neighbors—indicative, as it is supposed to be, of the creation of a counter-influence to that of Russia. The partisans of reaction who still encircle the secluded chamber of the maniac monarch look upon the new connection with as unconcealed aversion as the friends of freedom do with hope. Every cheer given by the population to the unostentatious cortège of the English sovereign had a political meaning; and the whole affair was universally contrasted with the sullen show of respect enforced by dint of police regulations when the Czar NICHOLAS, for the last time, visited the capital of his vassal relation. The heir presumptive is a very different man from his brother. He is a plain-spoken, straight forward soldier, who has never been at any pains to win popularity, and who has seldom made any decided profession of liberal opinions. But he is believed to be a man of his word. He is known to be a decided enemy to the domination exercised by Russia over the cabinet of Berlin. He is supposed to regard the imperialism of LOUIS NAPOLEON with distrust and dislike; and he is said to lean towards Great Britain as the fittest and firmest ally that Prussia can have. All this gives rise to various hopes for the future, and accounts for certain movements in a contrary direction—directions which are likely ere long to attract very general attention. Twelve months ago nobody believed that a reconciliation between the Courts of St. Petersburg and Vienna was possible. Many circumstances have lately become known that wear a different aspect. Secret negotiations are said to be actively carrying on, having for their object the obliteration of past resentments and the resumption of that entente cordiale between the despotisms of Eastern Europe, which was interrupted by the willful and wanton invasion of Turkey by the late Czar.

The Cherbourg fêtes have drawn forth several remarkable expressions of opinion during the last week on the other side of the Channel. Count PERSIGNY, the honestest and frankest of LOUIS NAPOLEON's personal friends, delivered an address to the Departmental Council of Etienne, in which he assumed the right of dealing with a freedom others would hardly have ventured to use, on the most reckless topics of the day. Professing himself to be a warm advocate of the English alliance, he declared that national susceptibilities on both sides had been unhappily so worked upon as that it would need all the skill and care of the two governments to prevent an open quarrel, and he endeavored to persuade his audience that but for the personal wisdom and ability of the Emperor, this catastrophe would already have ensued. He then proceeded to defend as temporarily indispensable the government control over the Press, intimating broadly that the time was at hand when the exceptional system in this respect ought to be abandoned. The Paris journals took some days to consider whether it would be safe for them to print what the ex-ambassador had thought fit to say, and its non-appearance during that period sufficiently attests how unpalatable these strictures were to the taciturn despot of St. Cloud. At last permission appears to have been vouchsafed to the newspapers not only to publish, but in a certain guarded sense to comment on the Etienne oration, and gradually proofs are multiplying of the truth of the views generally taken by our journals regarding the international question. A masterly article in the Journal des Débats reproves with great dignity and spirit the tone of the mischief-makers on both sides of the water, and says plainly that the thoughtful and opulent classes in France look upon a war with England as an unmixed evil. The fact is, that neither the Orleanists nor the Republicans whose sentiments find measured expression in the columns of the Siècle have any interest in strengthening the preponderance of the military element, already far too great. The Free-Trade Party, which is far from insignificant in point of numbers, wealth or intelligence in the large towns, speak their mind through the lips of M. MICHEL CHEVALIER, who has been making a demonstration at Herault in favor of progress and peace.

Of domestic interest there is hardly anything worthy of notice. The new Secretary of State for India was sworn in at the Privy Council held at Osborne yesterday, and this morning's Gazette contains the list of the newly-appointed members of the Council for Indian Affairs, constituted by the recent statute. As a whole, the selection made by Lord STANLEY is creditable to his judgment and independence of obsolete party ties. It embraces some of the most distinguished individuals who in either a civil or military capacity have served in Asia; and the names of LAWRENCE, MONTGOMERY and RAWLINSON need no comment. On their part the moribund Company have not been less anxious to prove, in their nomination of members to serve in the new Board, that they appreciated talent, experience and worth. Their nominees are in every way worthy to sit side by side with those made in the name of the Crown; and if the good Government of a remote continent, inhabited by one hundred and thirty millions of dissimilar people could be conducted by a body of gentlemen sitting in a comfortable back room in Leadenhall-street, I doubt not those now called upon to try, would reasonably well succeed. The monstrous anomaly and absurdity of the attempt is in private admitted by all men of common sense who have ever seriously considered the subject; but in public no one ventures to say so, for no one is prepared to affront the love of national domination that enters so laregly into John Bull's character. The advices from the scenes of the late mutiny continue to be of a reassuring kind; and a period of exhaustion is likely to ensue which bureaucrats of all parties and of every degree will, of course, write down as prosperity and content.

Symptoms of the resuscitation of sectarian discord have appeared once more in Ireland. Cardinal WISEMAN has been making an ecclesiastical progress through certain portions of that country, and, as might have been anticipated, he has been received by the heads of the Catholic community with every mark of distinction. Some days ago His Eminence was the guest of the Lord Mayor of Dublin, at an entertainment given to celebrate the quickened interchange of communication between Ireland and America. On such an auspicious occasion, political and religious differences ought certainly to have been laid aside; and so they appear to have been as far as the worthy civic magistrate was concerned. His invitations included persons of all creeds and parties, without distinction; and in the first instance the Viceroy, the Lord Chancellor, the Chief Secretary, and the Attorney General, intimated their acceptance of those that were sent to them. On hearing, however, that Cardinal WISEMAN was to be present, these noble and learned functionaries wrote to the Lord Mayor politely, but pointedly, expressing their inability to take part in the contemplated festivities. The reason, no doubt, was, that as Cardinal, Archbishop WISEMAN would take precedence of the Chancellor and all other dignitaries, the Lord-Lieutenant only excepted, being the representative in Ireland of the Queen. Such a recognition of the spiritual and temporal priority, so long-claimed by Rome for her prince prelates, the present administration, with their antecedents and opinions, could hardly perhaps have been expected to render. Lord EGLINTON was the person by whom, in 1848, a bill introduced by the then existing government of Lord JOHN RUSSELL, authorizing the establishment of diplomatic relations with the Vatican, was most vehemently opposed; and it was at his instance that a clause was introduced which has served, as it was intended, to render the bill nugatory;—I allude to the provision whereby an envoy or plenipotentiary of the Pope is admissible in that capacity by the sovereign of the United Kingdom if he be a person in Holy orders. The restriction was regarded as an infringement on the inherent discretion of an independent State to make choice of its own representatives at foreign courts, and upon this ground the Pope has always refused to send an ambassador here or to receive one. Lord EGLINTON's bland demeanor and general impartiality as head of the Irish department has subsequently won for him no ordinary degree of popularity among all classes of society, and party feeling had so much abated that some of his warmest panegyrists have been writers in the most uncompromising organs of the Catholic priesthood. The untoward incident of the dinner at the Dublin Mansion House will in all likelihood cause a change of tone in many quarters such as I have adverted to, and already notes of warning sound shrill where all was conciliation previously.

Attempts are likewise making to revive the old spirit of religious jealousy and hatred of race. An open-air meeting was held last week to demand retribution for the lives of two men named CORMAC, who were condemned and executed some months ago for the murder of a Mr. ELLIS, who had rendered himself obnoxious to the peasantry by certain of his dealings with respect to the letting of land. Mr. ELLIS was a Protestant, and so was every juror by whom the accused were tried. The Judge who presided was a Catholic, being no other than the well known Mr. KEOGH, formerly member for Athlone. His conduct on the bench in the case in question, caused at the time no little animadversion, owing to his admission of the eavesdropping of the jail in evidence, and the unequivocal expression of his opinion that the CORMACS were guilty. They died protesting their innocence, and facts have subsequently transpired which cast, it is thought, some doubts upon the correctness of the finding by the Jury. The matter has been taken up on sectarian grounds; and Mr. Justice KEOGH is denounced as a renegade by his zealous coreligionists. One of the speakers at the late meeting, the Rev. Mr. KENYON, went the length of declaring that justice would not be done to the bereaved family of CORMAC until the learned Judge was hanged! It is, however, indisputable that the system of impanneling juries in Ireland is open to the gravest censure, and it is only marvelous how it should have been suffered to survive so long.

INDIA.

Quiet on the Peninsula—Effect of the Gwalior Route—Decline of the Rebellion—Mr. Layard on the State of India—A War between England and America Desirable—English Ignorance of the New World.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BOMBAY, Wednesday, Aug. 4, 1858.

Since the date of my last everything is quiet. In fact, since the fall of "Gwalior" we have hardly had enough of interest from "up country" to remind us that we are still at war.

The rebels got a tremendous thrashing at the above-named place; and Sir HUGH ROSE, by this action, has done more for the quiet of India than all the battles that have been fought since the "massacre of Cawnpore," or, as Mr. LAYARD would, doubtless, call it, the "festivities at Cawnpore." The ranks of the "pucka" Sepoys have thinned amazingly lately, and, although large bodies of rebels still keep the field, they are for the most part undisciplined and ragged. A few weeks ago I wrote you that there were still an immense number of rebels roaming about the country. But now, the force have so dwindled away, that hardly one-half the number could be got together, and these without guns and completely dispirited. The NENA shows his sense by still keeping his head out of all traps and pitfalls. Would that some friendly Rajah could "bag" him, as the "Lucknow Moulvis" the other day was "bagged." We have had only a few skirmishes for some two or three weeks, and though there are no less than three rebel leaders, with a force of from 15,000 to 20,000 each, still at large, besides numerous little bands of from 100 to 1,000 men, yet in no instance can they screw up their courage to the sticking point. But all seem to act upon that well known idea of, "he who fights and runs away may live," &c. At any rate, they show themselves to be very light-footed. The additional troops from England will certainly be able to crush the last spark of this terrible conflagration.

By recent advices from England we see that Mr. LAYARD had been getting up quite a fever all over the country, denominated "Sepoy sympathy." I am afraid that, should he show his head in India again, there would be this additional "fact" for him to record, viz.: that he was tarred and feathered. Now, far be it from me to praise "English justice," it's an article scarce and high, so far as my experience goes; but, at the same time, when people begin to tell us that no atrocities have been committed by the Sepoys, and that British soldiers, acting under the command of hot-headed Generals, have done more to cause this rebellion to spread than anything else, and that the Sepoys are misjudged and ill-used, we feel almost like wishing them in the place of the poor murdered victims of Cawnpore, Futteghur, Allahabad, Delhi, Lucknow, Jhansi, and a host of other places. I know from my own experience the falsity of some of Mr. LAYARD's stories. Not that he would willingly say other than the strict truth. But what, let me ask, is his evidence worth—the evidence of a man who was quietly living at home in England on the 15th and 16th of July, 1857—beside that of the men who saw with their own eyes the horrors of Cawnpore? I am reminded of the reason that Sir WALTER RALEIGH gives us for abandoning his History of the World, when, after witnessing the murder of a man from his prison window, a friend called and told him that in a quarrel between a soldier and a civilian the latter was run through—he saw it with his own eyes. A few moments after, another party, who also saw the murder, comes to him and says the soldier was killed—while still another tells him "neither of them were killed; both of them are now in prison," or something to that effect.

With regard to a war with England on Yankee account, I hope, if our people conclude to have a brush, they will wait till matters in the East are fully settled, and fight upon an equality. It is quite time that the mass of the English Army should get posted up regarding America, for a more ignorant set it was never before my lot to fall in with—I mean in respect to American affairs. In fact, nearly the whole lot, men and officers, are "tarred with one brush." Our ten-year-old grammar-schoolboys could teach them their A B C's in geography of almost any country. Speaking with an intelligent Englishman, the other day—one that called himself educated—about the "Mississippi crevasse," he says: "The Mississippi—the Mississippi—where is that?" Having informed him, he replied: "Oh! yes; I thought it was in Canada!" A lady once asked me if I knew her brother in America, named DOYLE; said he lived in Boston, St. Louis, or New-Orleans—right about there somewhere. As I had once been acquainted with an Irishman in Boston of the same name, (who sold cake and candy for a livelihood,) I told her that I had met a man named DOYLE in Boston, upon which she immediately concluded it must have been her brother. Some of their ideas of Yankee land are sublime, truly, as when one day a lady said to a friend of mine: "Are you an American?" "Yes" "Why, your skin is almost as white as mine; I thought you Americans were black." A very good joke happened while in Calcutta: In speaking of South America, I was about to remark upon the horrid state of the roads in the Winter season upon the pampas of Buenos Ayres, (where I had recently been traveling,) when one of the large company of officers present spoke up, and before I had had time to begin my story, said: "Oh, yes; I know they have very fine roads there; I have been in Canada myself." They all know where Canada is, but beyond that their knowledge extends not. Another one of the company who, a young Scotchman and a profound believer in the "Arrowsmith hoax," wanted to know if it was not true that at "Chichago," as he called it, (meaning Chicago,) people at the hotels eat with their "bowie-knives and revolvers lying upon the table ready for instant use." This same young man had the idea in his head that 30,000 Zouaves, or 20,000 English troops, could walk from one end of America to the other in case of war. I told him of a certain BURGOYNE that tried that game once, and how he fared; and also of a Lord CORNWALLIS, and again of a Gen. PAKENHAM, at New-Orleans, upon all of which subjects he was totally ignorant. The only thing he did know was, that the Shannon captured the Chesapeake. He had not even heard of the Constitution.

In view of such facts, can a man be blamed for wishing only just war enough to brush off the rust of his neighbor's ignorance? S.

THE TELEGRAPHIC CABLE.

Speech of Charles T. Bright at Dublin.

The Lord Mayor, after some highly complimentary remarks, having proposed the health of Mr. BRIGHT, that gentleman said:

MY LORD MAYOR, MY LORD CARDINAL AND GENTLEMEN: I beg to return to your lordship and to all present my most sincere thanks for the great honor which you have conferred upon me this evening in drinking my health, and for the warm and hearty welcome with which you have greeted me. [Cheers.] I cannot but be personally gratified to the utmost degree at the manner in which I have been associated with this demonstration as an instrument in the carrying into effect of the great work which has been recently completed [cheers;] but I am sensible, in the contemplation of our success and its result, of the presence of those higher and more comprehensive considerations which must be felt by all of us; and I assure you that the undertaking was originally projected with nobler views than could be elicited by any mere motives for making money or fame by its accomplishment, and the part which I have taken in it inspires in my mind very different feelings to those of pride and self glorification. [Loud cheers.] The social and political advantages of telegraphic communication can be more truly and eloquently set forward by those who see and experience its effect than a worker in the field itself, but the importance of the Atlantic line has already been forcibly shown by the first piece of news which it conveyed, viz.: the information respecting the collision between the Europa and the Arabia at sea, by which (not to speak of the anxiety respecting the safety of those on board) the saving of a considerable sum of money—I suppose at least £50,000—in the needless insurance of the ship and her cargo, must be set down as one of the commercial benefits bestowed by the safe submersion of the wire; and we need not look far back upon the history of the world to find many examples of the vital consequences of the rapid interchange of interference. What might not have been saved during our great war at the beginning of this century, at the very end of the struggle with NAPOLEON. One of the most sanguinary engagements that ever occurred might have been prevented by a single telegraphic message from Toulouse, announcing the establishment of peace. [Hear.] I cannot, indeed, take to myself all that your lordship has been good enough to say concerning me, but I must do my best to approach such a standard as you have pictured. [Cheers.] In the position which I have occupied as engineer to the Atlantic Telegraph Company, I have had the most valuable coöperation and assistance from Mr. CANNING, Mr. WOODHOUSE, Mr. EVERETT, Mr. CLIFFORD, and all the members of the engineering staff whose names are now familiar to you all, and I very much regret that they cannot be here to thank you for the festive honors which you would, I am sure have bestowed upon them. [Hear and cheers] I have one feeling of satisfaction in our commemoration which even exceeds the individual satisfaction which the Lord Mayor's hospitality and your kindness afford. We have especial reasons in these islands for some degree of pride in regard to the achievement which is at this moment being celebrated in New-York as well as here, for although its consummation has been shared by the other great branch of the Anglo-Saxon race with us, yet the birth of the Electric Telegraph and the further invention of the Submarine Telegraph is due to fellow-countrymen whose names should be remembered by every one who values our preëminence and the advancement of science and civilization. [Hear, hear.] Messrs. COOKE and WHEATSTONE patented in England, in 1837, the first telegraph which assumed a practical form. A mode of communicating signs through wires had been known for some years at lecture tables. for the instruction and entertainment of classes, but it is probable that that electric telegraph would have been devoted to such employment only for some time, but for the enterprise, science, and perseverance of Mr. COOKE. In June, 1839, he completed his first line of telegraph from London to Drayton, and after this the system was gradually extended throughout Great Britain, but it was not until later that the other States in the Old and New Worlds availed themselves of the example which had been set in this country. The first line in America was laid between Washington and Baltimore, by a subsidy for Congress, in 1843. The Submarine Telegraph, the latest and most valuable development of telegraphic art, also derives its birth and practical form from our country's genius and skill, [Hear, hear.] In 1850, an experimental line was laid between Dover and Calais, which was followed, in 1851, by the submersion of a conductor protected by iron wires laid spirally round it to afford a greater degree of strength and protection. This line was projected by Mr. BRETT, to whose energy its establishment is chiefly due, and laid by Mr. CRAMPTON, one of the most eminent of our English engineers. After this, wires were made in England, and laid by Englishmen in every direction, between Ireland and Scotland, (in connection with which I may say that it is exactly six years since I sent the first message from the shores of Great Britain,) to the Hague, Belgium, the Mediterranean, and across the Gulf of St. Lawrence, [loud cheers.] The idea of laying a cable to unite Europe with America naturally arose from the establishment of these lines, and it would not be an easy or a pleasing task to endeavor to select any individual name on which to place the honor of originating the great enterprise whose triumph we are now celebrating. I have labored in its interests for a long time, and I would take this opportunity of stating, in reference to a part of the work which has generally been ascribed to me, that I disclaim the suggestion of it, though I have advocated it strongly—I mean the mode of starting from the middle. In 1843, Lord PALMERSTON said, at the meeting of the British Association at York, that the time might come when the Prime Minister of England would be asked in the House of Commons whether it was true that a war had broken out in India, and that the reply of the Minister would be, "Wait until I telegraph to the Governor General." That was then considered a joke of Lord PALMERSTON's, but it was now a thing which they almost expected daily to see realized. [Loud applause.] In 1853, shortly after the laying of the line of the Magnetic Telegraph Company between Portpatrick and Donaghadee, I was speaking with Captain HARVES, R. N., who had given considerable assistance in directing the course of the cable, in regard to the Atlantic line, about which I was then occupying myself, and he advised that we should commence from the middle, in the manner we did. [Hear, hear.] I have obtained the leave of the Lord Mayor to propose a toast, which I venture to engage that you will receive with as much warmth as you were good enough to show when my health was proposed. There must be in all undertakings a man of business, and many great undertakings have fallen through for want of that system which large commercial experience can alone teach. [Hear, hear.] None of the first projectors of that line, among which I have the honor to include myself, had that experience; and to Mr. FIELD, although he did not take part in the practical carrying out of the work, there is due a very great share of the credit arising from the success of the enterprise; and it must be said in all truth, that but for his wonderful energy and capability in the negotiations and other matters which he took in hand, the line to America could not have been in existence so soon as it is. [Cheers.] I met Mr. FIELD, for the first time, in 1855. He was then in England as the representative of the Telegraph Company between New-York and Newfoundland, in connection with which Mr. BRETT had undertaken to cause a line to be laid across the Atlantic. The means were, however, wanting for the carrying out of this arrangement, the notion of a conductor being laid across the Atlantic not being fanned with the air of popular favor on either side of the ocean. In the year following I entered into partnership with Mr. FIELD, Mr. BRETT and Mr. WHITEHOUSE, who had been previously joined with us in electrical experiments in regard to certain conditions of an Atlantic line; and we set to work at once in earnest for the formation of a company, some of my friends at Liverpool and in the north country, who had faith in the result of what I took in hand, subscribing largely to it. The rest of our work you know [cheers]—the construction of the cable, its shipment, and our final success. [Hear, hear, and applause.] I would that there had been some one more competent, and yet equally acquainted with the merits of Mr. FIELD, to do justice to those high and estimable qualities—[hear, hear]—to that energy and activity of mind which have been so ably exhibited by him in this cause. But I have said enough to show that to forget the great part which he has taken in the promotion of this noble enterprise would be as ungenerous and ungracious as if we could imagine our friends in America [hear, hear,] who are at this moment celebrating our triumph, passing over some of us on this side who have contributed to our success, and forgetting the degree of share which British capital, experience and skill, and the aid which the British Government has afforded, have had in carrying out the undertaking. [Applause.] I therefore propose "The health of Mr. FIELD, and the American officers who have aided in the enterprise," and beg to thank you again for your kindness towards myself. [Loud and long-continued cheering.]

The Cable Celebration in New-York—A Growl from John Bull.

From the London Times, Aug. 28.

The way in which the people of England and America have each received the news of the successful laying of the Atlantic Telegraph is perfectly characteristic. The Agamemnon comes back to Portsmouth and pays off, officers and crew going right or left, without any one testifying extraordinary interest in their proceedings, or giving a second thought whether they go or stay, or even who they are. The staff of engineers and electricians on board the Agamemnon—the working bees of the hive—the men who really laid the cable—are fast dispersing. The cause of submarine telegraphy stands in too urgent need of the services of these master hands to leave them idle long. Ships are waiting, freighted with cables, and European Governments and companies are loud in their demands for the aid and assistance of these great cable layers. In another week, probably, of those actually engaged in laying the Atlantic Cable, only Mr. BRIGHT, the Chief Engineer, will be in England, and, when he has received his well-merited ovation at the hands of the municipality of Dublin, the whole affair of that cable will be forgotten in its every-day working, till on some other fine day our countrymen will learn, perhaps, that the same men have completed our electric communication with Australia, with India, with the Cape, or wherever else it may be wanted. In America, however, the case is different, and there the news has been received with all that enthusiasm of large "posters," speeches, and "Bunkum" addresses in which on such occasions, whether of British union or British outrage, our cousins are always so prolific. No town or community too small to present its address of congratulation. There are to be fireworks in New-York. The city is to be illuminated, and $10,000 have been voted for an entertainment to Mr. CYRUS FIELD and —— the captain and officers of the Niagara. According to this, it certainly appears, first, that the English have on the whole rather underrated the importance of the event; and, secondly, that the Americans are rather overdoing it, considering the object they have in view, which is simply that of monopolizing all the credit due to the projection and completion of this great undertaking. In every speech made, in every address presented, not only is England not mentioned, but even allusions to the wealth and enterprise she embarked in the scheme are so studiously ignored that people here begin to rub their eyes, and wonder if English science, English money, and English men really did conceive and carry out to a successful issue the whole plan of the Atlantic cable from beginning to end. Under such circumstances it may be well to state at once that the idea of the submarine telegraph between England and America was started here and worked out here, formed into a practical plan, and into a company. By this company the money was raised almost entirely in England; in fact, all the shares held in America from first to last are scarcely more than half the number taken up in Liverpool in one week alone. The cable has been made in England, English engineers devised and constructed the paying-out machines at the works of EASTON & AMOS. English electricians planned and ascertained by practical experience the best means of working through the wire. All the ships of the expedition, except the Niagara and Susquehanna last year, and the Niagara this year were provided by the English Government, and both on board the Agamemnon and Niagara English electricians and English engineers were alone employed to submerge the cable—in fact, to accomplish the undertaking. Yet it is actually upon such facts as these that the States go into ecstacies and get up demonstrations upon their own courage, perseverance, and enterprise in the accomplishment of this scheme, upon their firm belief in its ultimate success, and upon the wealth (some £80,000 or £90,000) they had embarked in it. A banquet is to be given at New-York to the captain and officers of the Niagara, "to commemorate the successful laying of the cable." Not a word of the English electricians and engineers on board that vessel, the men who were sent to lay, and who did lay, the cable. It is generally the fate of those who grasp at inordinate quantities to have even the small share which would otherwise be given to them withheld. This rule is likely to apply in the case of the officers of the Niagara, and if they put in a claim to be considered foremost among the agents in this great scheme they must expect to hear of things which, in the general satisfaction on this side of the water, would otherwise have been forgiven, if not forgotten. They will be told how the rough, and, to say the very least of it, the careless manner in which they threw out the rope from the Niagara at Keyham, after the first failure, was nearly destroying that half, and it, in fact, did destroy very many miles of it. They will be told, also, how, even in the last trips even the character of "guest" did not suffice to protect the English gentlemen and workmen on board their ship from such annoyance and insult that it was feared that when the vessel joined at the rendezvous the English on board the Niagara would refuse to proceed any further in her, and so put a stop for a time to the whole scheme. In fact, it was only through the influence of Mr. CANNING, on board the Agamemnon, that such a strike, if we may so call it, among the men, was prevented before the vessels left Plymouth. Captain HUDSON and his officers will also be reminded how, when the ships returned to Queenstown, after the great storm, they were almost to a man against further attempts, and if their opposition had had the least weight with those intrusted with carrying out the undertaking the second voyage would never have been made, and the completion of the Atlantic cable deferred at least for many, many years. This is not the first time that American ships have gained great name of a certain kind under false colors, and the officers of the Niagara are building up a reputation on the Atlantic cable, with which, however, they have had no more real connexion than they had, it is said, with the great public ball at Plymouth given in their name, and on which, likewise, they contrived to found a brief reputation for hospitality and profusion. If these officers deserve a public recognition at all, what do not the real workingmen of the Agamemnon—Mr. BRIGHT, Prof. THOMPSON, Mr. CANNING and Mr. CLIFFORD—deserve? As we have said, however, the cause of telegraphy has too many demands upon the labors of most of these practised cable layers, to permit them to be idle here. On Sunday or Monday next Mr. CLIFFORD starts first to Valentia, and next for Newfoundland, with the shore ends of the Atlantic cable. These ropes are exceedingly massive, weighing upwards of six tons to the mile, and when these have been carefully spliced and added on, the Atlantic telegraph will be complete, and we trust remain so for years to come. About five or six miles of the shore end at Valentia were laid last year, and this length has been buoyed, so that Mr. CLIFFORD will only have to grapple for it and to make the splice with the rest. Submerging the portion at Newfoundland will require more care and a judicious choice of position, but such cables in such shallow waters can neither be lost nor broken, and in the care of such an engineer as Mr. CLIFFORD they run little risk of either.

Chess—Morphy at Birmingham.

The proceedings of the Chess Congress, says a Birmingham paper, have been almost entirely suspended for the purpose of watching the progress of a chess-playing feat never before witnessed in England. We refer to Mr. MORPHY's playing eight games blindfolded. His opponents were Lord LYTTLETON, President of the Association; Mr. SALMON, the best player Ireland affords; Mr. J. KIPPING, Jr., Secretary of the Manchester Club, and a very strong player; Mr. AVERY, President of the Birmingham Club; Mr. CARR, Secretary of the Leamington Club; Dr. FREEMAN, Mr. RHODES, and Mr. W. R. WILLS. The play commenced at 1 o'clock, and terminated about 6½ o'clock, and resulted in Mr. MORPHY winning every game except the one with Mr. KIPPING. The modus operandi was very simple. Mr. MORPHY sat at one end of the library; at a table at the other end sat his eight opponents, with their eight boards before them. Mr. MORPHY, gazing at the lozenged window above him, and leaning carelessly with his arm thrown over the bench on which he sits, attacked each board in succession. Move and counter-move were audibly announced by a friend, and when the tables had been traversed one move at a time, the process was recommenced. It was a most interesting scene. Mr. MORPHY had the whole eight games so thoroughly "in his head," that when a piece was accidentally shifted on one of the boards, and a move was made in which it was involved, he at once detected something was wrong and exclaimed that it was "an impossible move." Such it was acknowledged to be. The piece ought never to have been on that square. In the same game Mr. MORPHY left a piece, en prise, the taking of which involved a mate in a few moves, and accordingly on his adversary taking the piece, unconscious of the snare laid for him, the game became Mr. MORPHY's almost immediately. His play was very rapid. Each game lasted on the average about 30 moves, so that he had to bear in mind at least 240 moves, and the position of every board throughout from beginning to end. The fact was evidently regarded by those present as an effort of genius not to be accomplished by more than one or two individuals in a century. Of the eight simultaneous games, Mr. MORPHY won six, drew one against Mr. AVERY, President of the Birmingham Chess Club, and lost only one, that against Mr. KIPPING. The eight games occupied about six hours, and at the close, Mr. MORPHY being asked if he felt fatigued, said, "Not in the least;" but he should be glad to get his dinner! The match between Messrs. STAUNTON and MORPHY stands thus: Stake, £500 a side; the scorer of the first 11 games wins. To commence on the 1st of November next. Mr. MORPHY was to proceed from Birmingham to Paris, to challenge Herr HARRWITZ, (hitherto the most celebrated blindfold player in Europe,) and probably afterwards to Breslau, to play Herr ANDERSSEN; but it is expected that this match with the latter will be played in London.

NEW-YORK CITY.

City Politics.

THE THIRD CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT.—The forthcoming campaign for members of Congress from the Third District, composed of the First, Second, Third, Fifth and Eighth Wards of this City, bids fair to be an exciting one. DANIEL E. SICKLES, the present member, is in the field for reëlection, and Gen. HIRAM WALBRIDGE yearns to serve another term, and expresses his determination to run again, whether he receives the regular nomination or not. BEN. WOOD, brother of FERNANDO, is also a candidate, more, it is understood, with a view to defeat SICKLES than his own success. With the Wood men the great object is the of defeat SICKLES, and to insure this they care but little who succeeds. Their tactics already being carried out, is to divide and conquer. Thus there will be at least three Democratic candidates, "regular," "irregular," "independent," and "stump." SICKLES, it is generally believed, will get the regular nomination, but this will not surprise or discourage the others, who have hopes of coming in first in the general scrub race. Mr. WALBRIDGE formally opens the campaign on Monday next by taking the "stump." He relies for support from the "solid" and commercial men of the District.

Efforts are being made to unite the opposition of the District upon one candidate, with fair prospect of success. In this connection, the names of A. J. WILLIAMSON, proprietor of the Dispatch; GUY R. PELTON, who represented the District in Congress two years ago; GEORGE W. MORTON, City Inspector, and others are mentioned.

THE SHERIFFALTY.—The principal fight for County officers will be for the office of Sheriff. JOHN KELLY, M. C., appears now to be the strongest man for this office on the Democratic side of the house. He is the favorite of the "Regulars," while he stands pretty well at Tammany, though his supposed intimacy with WOOD and his supporters is not relished over well. JOHN MCKEON and others of that ilk are strongly opposed to KELLY, and Mr. McK. has avowed his determination to stump the City against him should he receive the nomination. Indeed, the name of Mr. MCKEON himself has been mentioned as a probable candidate for the same office. Mr. KELLY has, besides, friendly competitors from among his own party in the persons of JOHN WILSON, now a Deputy Sheriff: WILLIAM TURNURE, proprietor of an up-town livery stable; Ex-Alderman JOSIAH W. BROWN, one of the tax Commissioners; and WILLIAM N. MCINTYRE, an inveterate Hard, and now in the pay of Uncle Sam.

From the opposition for the same office, the names of Police Justice JAMES W. WELSH, Police Justice B. W. OSBORN, Ex-Alderman JAMES KELLY and Capt. JOSEPH H. TOONE are used. All but the last-named are Republicans. Should the Democrats run two tickets, as there is a probability of their doing, a united Opposition will stand a better opportunity than they have lately had of electing their candidates. Steps have been already taken to a union of the Republicans and Americans on this and the other County officers, and the Republicans will doubtless show their hands in the matter on Wednesday evening next, when they meet in their respective Wards for the election of delegates to the various nominating Conventions. A union must, of course, be based upon an equitable division of the offices—if the Sheriff is given to the Republicans, the Americans must, as a matter of course, get the County Clerk, and so on. Hence, it is pretty difficult, just at this time, to ascertain which of the candidates named above stands the best chance, though present appearances indicate that Justice WELSH has the lead. Captain TOONE, who came within an ace of being made Sheriff four years ago, (and who declares that he was cheated out of the position,) is understood to be resolved to go before the people in any event. Such action on his part would, of course, only result in the success of the Democratic aspirant.

THE COMPTROLLERSHIP.—For the office of Comptroller, we have heard but two names prominently mentioned from among the Democracy—GEO. H. PURSER, Corporation Attorney, and RICHARD B. CONNOLLY, County Clerk. From the Opposition side we remember to have heard only the name of ZOPHAR MILLS mentioned.

FOR COUNTY CLERK.—JOHN CLANCY, President of the Board of Aldermen and editor of the Leader, and DANIEL E. DELAVAN are the principal Democratic candidates for County Clerk. The Alderman's chances are said to be fine, but being a DOUGLAS man, his nomination will be very strongly opposed by the Administration men, so called, and the Daily News, who threaten that he will be defeated even though he should receive the Tammany nomination.

GEORGE E. SHERWOOD, of Sherwood's well-known Broadway Saloon, and WM. DOOLEY, Republicans, and EDWARD BEATTY, who was defeated last time by R. B. CONNOLLY, and Ex-Police Justice DAVIDSON, Americans, are named from the side of the Opposition. Should a union take place, and the Americans get their man for Sheriff, then SHERWOOD's chances for the nomination will be the best. But should a Republican get the united union nomination, DAVIDSON will, it is thought, have the lead.

GOVERNORS OF THE ALMSHOUSE.—Two Governors of the Almshouse are to be elected at the next election. The successful men must, by the law, differ in politics. Thus, in any event, the Opposition must have one of them. WM. N. BROWN, proprietor of the "Pewter Mug" or "Little Tammany," the present Governor TOWNSEND, SAMUEL MYERS, one of the clerks of the Common Council and an up town German physician, whose very hard name we do not now remember, are among the Democratic candidates. The friends of BROWN declare that he has the "inside of the track."

THE CORONERS.—Four Coroners are also to be elected this Fall, in place of the present incumbents, whose terms expire with this year, and the candidates are already too numerous to mention. All the present incumbents, PERRY and HILL, Opposition, and GAMBLE and CONNERY, Democrats, are anxious for a reëlection, while most of their deputies would not be averse to promotion. Among the latter, Dr. PHILIP O'HANLON stands prominent. Among the outsiders are included Dr. WILLIAM O'DONNELL; Ex-Coroner (now a Custom-House officer) Dr. P. MCDONNELL, late a Surgeon to the Municipal Police; and THOMAS WHEELAN, alias "Irish Tom," who yet retains in his parlor, as a memento and trophy, the hod by which he earned his bread when he "first came over." Dr. PERRY, one of the present incumbents, who was put in nomination by the Americans, is considered certain of a union Opposition nomination, and Dr. HILL (Republican) is sanguine of the same success. Both reside in the upper part of the City. Capt. F. B. O'KEEFE, a Mexican volunteer, and one of Gen. WALKER's men, is also in the lists. FRANK, it is hardly necessary to say, is a Democrat.

JUSTICE OF THE SUPERIOR COURT.—A Justice of the Superior Court is to be elected this Fall, in place of Justice DUER, deceased. We have heard no persons mentioned as probable candidates for this position.

DANCING.

A. DODWORTH'S
DANCING ACADEMIES,
No. 806 Broadway, New York,
No. 137 Montague-place, Brooklyn,
Will commence in New York on SATURDAY, Sept. 25; in Brooklyn, FRIDAY Sept. 24.

Mr. DODWORTH would take occasion to say that he has long felt the necessity of introducing a system of instruction for the use of the younger pupils, by which the exercise of dancing would be of more benefit physically, and more useful in the development of graceful movement than it has been of late years. The facility with which the Polka and similar dances of the present time are acquired, has induced many to neglect those exercises that were formerly indispensable. To that neglect, as one of the causes may be attributed the appearance of so many round-shouldered young misses of the present generation. They are sent to school and allowed to stoop over their desks without intermediate exercise, until the growing frame assumes the position in which it has been so long restrained; they are then sent to a teacher of dancing, with the expectation that by learning the Polka, Schottische and a few other dances, all this will be remedied and that they will at once become graceful women. Surely these things should be better understood. Were children sent to dancing early in life, at intervals during their necessary studies, and the teacher allowed to exercise them in such a manner, and in such dances (in addition to the fashionable ones) as would add grace to the figure, walk, and every movement, something would then be gained consistent with the true object of this valuable accomplishment. Anxious to restore the art to its former usefulness, Mr. Dodworth instructed his classes in that acknowledged graceful study, the "Minuet de la Coeur," and other dances of similar usefulness. The evident success of this course in its effect upon the pupils encouraged him to give more attention to Dancing as connected with Calisthenics; and, during his late tour through Germany, France and Great Britain, he made it his business to call upon the most prominent teachers, and consult with them in regard to the best methods of accomplishing those desirable results. He hopes, therefore, to have gained such information as will, in addition to his own experience, enable him to present to his pupils a system that will not only make them dance the Polka, but will improve their health, figure and walk, and, consequently have a salutary effect upon every movement in life.

During his European tour of this season, Mr. Dodworth has had favorable opportunities of studying the peculiar dances of Poland and Hungary so popular at the present time in Vienna. Some of these, with other novelties, will be introduced at the earliest moment of the present season.

Circulars may be had at either Academy.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Our advices from Brazil are to the 9th ultimo. The operations of the American Engineers upon the second section of the Pedro II. Railroad still occupied public attention. Mr. Mead, the American Minister, had accompanied the President of the Company to the theatre of work. From Montevideo and Buenos Ayres advices are but little later than those given in the Times of yesterday. Beyond a trifling pronunciamento in the Oriental State, which was on the eve of suppression, the news is destitute of interest.

A duel was fought yesterday morning, near Richmond, between O. Jennings Wise, Editor of the Enquirer, and the Hon. Sherrard Clemens, member of Congress from the Wheeling District. Mr. Clemens was wounded in the thigh. The cause of the difficulty was the Enquirer's comments on Mr. Clemens, in connection with the Gubernatorial question. Mr. Clemens was the challenger.

The proceedings at the National Horse Exhibition at Springfield, on Thursday, were brought to a stand-still by a heavy rain-storm. The weather cleared up in the evening, however, and a brilliant ball and promenade concert took place at the City Hall. The Exhibition proceeded yesterday, and will be concluded to-day.

In Cincinnati, yesterday morning, a destructive fire occurred on Front-street, between Broadway and Ludlow. Five buildings were entirely destroyed, and three or four others were damaged. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

The rendezvous of the Paraguay Expedition has been fixed at Buenos Ayres, from its proximity to the mouth of the Parana River, up which the vessels are to proceed.

Yesterday was kept a partial holiday in Boston, it being the 228th anniversary of the settlement of that place.

The trial of William Mulligan, for the assault on Mr. Webb, of the San Francisco Vigilance Committee, was to have taken place yesterday, in the Court of General Sessions, but was postponed, on the application of counsel, till Monday. Adolph Hartmann pleaded guilty to receiving stolen goods. There were five indictments pending against him. He was an old offender, and was sentenced to five years in the State Prison. Francis Dedieu, a young French shoemaker, was placed on trial for arson in the first degree—a capital crime. On the 21st March, as is alleged, he set fire to the premises No. 86 Leonard-street, where he occupied a room. His furniture and stock in trade were insured for $800. The testimony adduced by the prosecution, yesterday, was very strong against him. Camphene had been freely applied, not only to the furniture, but also to the contents of trunks, which were found to be on fire when the lids were raised. The prosecution finished their case yesterday. To-day the defence will resume. The trial, which is an important one, might have been concluded yesterday, but Judge Russell declined sitting. With ordinary perseverance on the part of the Court, a verdict may be reached to-day.

The Commissioners of Health transacted little business of public interest yesterday. The steamers Florida and Montgomery, from Savannah, were allowed to come up to the City immediately. So were many other vessels from Southern ports. The City Inspector was directed to abate some of the piggery nuisances complained of in the upper part of the City, below Eighty-sixth-street, and to cause the removal of some rotten potatoes from the Anna Cole, lying at the foot of Vesey-street.

The examination of Ray Tompkins and John C. Thompson was yesterday resumed at Staten Island, before Judge Metcalf. The witnesses examined were Doctor Bissell, the Hospital physician, Doctor Waller, the Deputy Health Officer, and Dr. Thompson, the Health Officer. The last witness was on the stand at the adjournment of the Court. The examination will be again proceeded with on Thursday next, at 10 o'clock A. M. A large crowd is daily in attendance, who manifest the liveliest interest in the proceedings, and whose sympathies it is plain to see are all with the parties on trial.

The troops in Camp Washington yesterday enjoyed a beautiful day, and employed the time in the erection of the new Sibley conical tents, which are very much preferred to the common wall-sided ones. Strict discipline prevails in camp, and every one yields ready and cheerful obedience to orders. The men are all well, and on good terms with the neighborhood.

About 12 o'clock Thursday night, Mr. Wm. H. Manegault, of Charleston, South Carolina, fell from the window of his room at the New-York Hotel, on the side fronting Washington-place, and was so seriously injured that he died in an hour. An inquest was held on the body yesterday, and a verdict rendered ascribing the death to the result of an accident. The remains will be removed to-day to Charleston for interment.

The annual regatta of the Empire City Club came off at Yorkville, yesterday, and two out of the four races were won by the four-oared shell boat Robert J. Brown, the fastest time being 34 minutes, 23 seconds—five-mile race. The champion race was won by the boat Cyrus W. Field, rowed by Hugh Burns—time, 44 minutes, 43 seconds.

The "bloody" Sixth Ward was the scene of another murder last night. A negro, named Wm. Darling, struck another negro, named Joseph Nichols, in the face, and was fatally stabbed in return. The transaction occurred at a grocery store at No. 25 Baxter-street, kept by a German named John Lewis. Nichols was arrested and lodged in the Sixth Ward Station-house.

The General Markets, yesterday, continued dull for Cotton. Increased firmness was discernible in Flour, Wheat and Corn, which were in good request. Sugars were brisker, and a shade dearer. The movements in Provisions, Rice and Coffee were moderate, indicating no remarkable changes. Naval stores were in pretty active demand. The auction sale of teas passed off very satisfactorily. No important alteration occurred in other branches of trade.

Touching Ourselves.

With the present number, the New-York Times enters upon the eighth year of its existence. Precisely seven years ago to-day the first sheet of the paper was put forth from the narrow quarters at No. 113 Nassau-street. It was issued without any untranquilizing apprehensions of the future. The enterprise, even before its realization, had the good fortune to secure a throng of well-wishers, placing its career beyond the reach of ordinary casualty; and from the moment the general motive and policy of the paper, and its place in current journalism, were made palpable to the general public, the measure of success and popularity accorded it exceeded the largest anticipations of those interested. The material history of the Times from that day, through these seven years, has been a record of steady progress and unvarying prosperity. Its daily circulation has augmented to a number in competition with any cotemporary print; the readers of its weekly issue are counted by hundreds of thousands; the editions for California and for Europe are eagerly demanded in every inn of the Old World, and in every land and island of the Pacific. The patronage of advertisers, we may add—needlessly, perhaps, for the fact is obvious—has kept pace with that of readers. And so urgent have been these united demands upon the enterprise of the proprietors, that to meet them the construction of the commodious and expensive building from which the Times now issues has become a matter of necessary outlay, supplying accommodations and facilities equal to the utmost exactions of future development.

In thus reviewing the financial success of this press, it is gratifying to know that it has been secured without departure from the scheme of conduct laid down at the outset; that, in truth, its prosperity is a fair result of its consistent integrity. Seven years ago public opinion was inadequately represented in the press by journals advocating on the one hand extreme radicalism, with its incidents and results, Socialism, Spiritualism, and Free-loveism; on the other hand, by journals conservative, reluctant, and to the last degree unprogressive; with an intermediate class, recklessly fluctuating between these, but in turn auxiliary to both. Upon a well-defined middle track—direct, decided, and unwavering—this paper entered. It became the exponent of an enlightened conservatism, qualified by a judicious recognition of the never-resting spirit of the age; so qualified, as never to hesitate at a wholesome advance, simply because it left some customary way-mark behind, and never to hasten forward merely for the sake of movement or wanton agitation. It has deviated from the common path now and again, by insisting upon a public morality coordinate with the private code, which should control the administration of Government. Without becoming the instrument of party, it has yielded as occasion required, to the necessity of taking an active part in vital political questions, but never with violent partisan acerbity, or in discourteous disregard of the feelings and convictions of those from whom we regretted to differ. To these self-ascriptions the accustomed reader of our columns must add his sanction; and that sanction is the best evidence of the fair dealing the paper has uniformly observed towards its initial engagements.

Of the future the past must be the warrant. Anticipating the essential changes in the machinery of journalism, involved in the increased frequency of intercourse by steam and electricity, the Times has carried its preparations for those advances to a point as yet unattained by any newspaper in the world. Its correspondence, its facilities for obtaining reliable intelligence, its internal organization, are all equal to the largest exigencies of that grand new era to which the Atlantic wire introduces us. In thus inaugurating the eighth year of the paper, we can safely pledge the means, resources, and experience of the establishment to meet the most exacting demands of the public. In human life, according to old physiologists, the seventh year completes the term of infancy. The Times, strong in all the vital attributes of journalhood, has passed that critical point, and may look to a protracted maturity of unexampled prosperity, the reward of courageous enterprise.

In saying thus much upon an exceptional occasion, we shall certainly be pardoned by those who appreciate the peculiar mission to which we are assigned. It is the fate of those who bring to the discussion of public questions a calm judicial spirit of investigation, independent of party, that they incur the dislike of partisans of every sort, and of all sides. To those who have afforded us a steadfast support from first to last, and to those who, avoiding either social and political extreme, and thoroughly detesting a press that panders to both, have sought the safe golden mean of liberal conservatism, it must be a satisfaction to know that such views are cordially approved by so numerous and intelligent a body as the readers of the New-York Times.

Grumbling John Bull.

We copy from the London Times of the 28th ult. a most extraordinary article in relation to the rejoicings in this country over the success of the Atlantic Telegraph. We call it an extraordinary article, for the tone of it is not only indecent and malignant towards this country, but wholly at variance with the usual tone of the paper in which it appears. The Times assumes that we have taken all the credit for the completion of the Telegraph to ourselves, and that we have ignored altogether the services of the British officers, engineers and others who assisted in the prosecution of the great work. "In every speech made," says that journal, "in every address presented, not only is England not mentioned, but even allusions to the wealth she embarked in the scheme are so studiously ignored that people here begin to rub their eyes, and wonder if English science, English money and English men really did conceive and carry out to a successful issue the whole plan of the Atlantic Cable, from beginning to end." (!). It is hardly worth while to take down the lofty assumptions of the Times, which have no more truth in them than the assertion that England was forgotten by us in our hilarious demonstrations. The writer of the ungenerous article in the Times, who has the malignity to make contemptible insinuations against the officers of the Niagara, will blush when he reads the accounts of the Cable celebrations in this City, in which so prominent a place was given to the officers of the English navy, to the engineers, and to every Englishman who was in any way connected with the Cable; and when he hears that our merchants, in bestowing medals upon our own countrymen for the part they took in the great work, made the English officers joint participators with them. The great event was celebrated not as an American achievement—though it might be fairly claimed as our own—but as one of the triumphs of science whose benefits were to be reaped by all the world. Our City Hall, and other of our public buildings, blazed with the honored names of Englishmen on the day of the celebration, and as many tokens of respect were bestowed upon the transatlantic friends of the Telegraph as upon our own citizens who had been connected with it.

The article in the Times was written in a thoroughly mean and contemptible spirit. We are very happy to know that nothing of the kind was manifested here in relation to the Cable, but that, on the contrary, a generous disposition was exhibited on all occasions by our people, and an anxious desire to give Englishmen the utmost that they were entitled to for their efforts in completing the great work.

Our Neighbors Over the Way.

New-Jersey is on the eve of indulging in that autumnal luxury, an election, bringing thereunto a more than ordinary zest and appetite. There is a Legislature to be chosen, which will either return the Hon. William Wright to the United States Senate, or name his successor. There are Congressmen to be elected from the five districts; some of the former members standing for reëlection, while elsewhere entirely fresh men are in the field. The contest will be supremely interesting. To understand something of the programme, we may present the nominations thus far effected:

First District,—Administration, George T. Walker, of Atlantic; Opposition, John T. Nixon, of Cumberland; Straight Republican, John H. Jones, of Camden. Mr. Walker, the Democratic candidate, is thoroughly orthodox on Lecompton. He is represented as a new-comer in the political lists, having his spurs yet to win. Mr. Nixon was a Whig in other days, and as such was elected to the State Assembly, where he was chosen Speaker, filling the office with signal ability. He passed from the Whigs to the Americans, and, with the great body of that party, has at last joined the coalition opposed to the Lecompton and other abuses of the Administration. He is a man of sterling value. Mr. Jones, the third candidate, is of the stripe of New-York Republicanism. Rather than permit an American to be elected, he will endeavor to elect an Administration member. His strength, however, whatever it may have been originally, is now said to be very near the vanishing point.

Second District.—Administration, James W. Wall, of Burlington. Opposition, John L. N. Stratton, of Burlington. A pair not unequally matched. Col. Wall is the son of the late Garret D. Wall, who at one time represented the State in the United States Senate. His talents are rather of a literary than of a political order. He is, however, a fluent and able speaker, with a good knowledge of men and of the world, ready wit, a shrewd debater, as ardent in likes as in enmities. A slight dash of discretion might be advantageously added to his composition. He may acquire it in his contest with Mr. Stratton, who is a gentleman of fine education and accomplishments, a veteran politician and capital stump orator. How far the nomination of Col. Wall affects the chances of Mr. Wright for the Senatorship we are unable to ascertain. The latest tilt in which the former has been engaged was directed against Mr. Wright, whom he has denounced in terms far less than courteous or respectful. The fight in the Second District will be singularly interesting.

Third District.—Neither party has yet made its nominations, and as the district is strongly Democratic, and true to the Administration, it is probable the nominee of that party will encounter no opposition. Mr. Garnet B. Adrain, the present representative, who consistently opposed the Lecompton mischief from first to last, will be, it is understood, a candidate before the Convention, with slight hope, however, of success. Had he announced himself at the first as a candidate independent of party, it is supposed the Anti-Lecompton strength of the district would have elected him. It is now too late. Mr. A. R. Speer, of Middlesex, is prominently named as the probable Democratic candidate.

Fourth District.—Opposition, Jetur R. Riggs, of Passaic. Mr. John Huyler, the present member, who, unlike his colleague Adrian, did support the Lecompton abomination, will be put forward by the Administration interest; but so strong is the Anti-Lecompton feeling in Sussex that the chances of the battle are in favor of his opponent, who is the present State Senator from his district.

Fifth District.—Administration, Jacob R. Wortendyke, of Hudson. Opposition, William Pennington, of Essex. Mr. Wortendyke is a very worthy man, a merchant of this City, who was sent to Congress two years ago, and has distinguished himself by fidelity to the Administration. His re-nomination was actively but ineffectually opposed in the Convention, a considerable number of bolters from which, headed by Mr. Charles Fink, a Douglas Democrat, have signified their intention of supporting Mr. Pennington. The latter is a highly popular Ex-Governor of New-Jersey, who has never yet served his State at Washington, but who, in the famous "Broad-seal" case, was the energetic means of sending others there to serve it. He is an effective public speaker, abounding in good hits and lively humor, and not deficient in the heavier metal of fact and information required by a career of successful stump talking. There is reason to believe that Mr. Pennington will be elected. If so, he may be expected to distinguish himself in debate, rather than in the uncongenial labors of the Committee-room.

To these capital elements of a sharp contest in regard to the popular side of Congress, must be added the movement for the reëlection of Mr. Wright to the Senate. The enemies of that gentleman allege that in the ardor of his ambition, he is dispensing his mighty wealth without stint, buying up districts, and appropriating whole counties. Such stories are easily told, and hard to verify. It will be safe to discredit them altogether. It is very certain, however, that no admissible means will be spared to return Mr. Wright; and that the agents of his faction are at work in every town of the State, endeavoring to secure the choice of a favorable legislature. No one has been named as a contestant for his place; though the Hon. Martin Ryerson, of Sussex, who has just resigned his seat on the bench of the Supreme Court, with the view of taking the stump adversely to the Administration, is regarded as available. Mr. Ryerson is a man of decided and varied talent; great influence; thorough political experience, and has figured hitherto an active Democrat. If it be desirable to send any but lay figures to fill the two senatorial chairs of New-Jersey at the Capitol, perhaps Mr. Ryerson can achieve the mission as well as another.

The Moral of the Last Syracuse Convention.

The probable results of the late Democratic State Convention, held at Syracuse, are manifold and important; but in no aspect of more value to politicians of every stripe, than in the lessons there furnished of obedience to party necessities, and the example of great concessions cheerfully made for the sake of securing united action. The defection of Wood is a mere personal folly, not extending beyond himself and his prominent allies. That concessions, and great concessions, must have been made internally to secure this external union, will be evident to any one who carefully reads the "resolutions" unanimously adopted by the Convention, with ordinary knowledge of the individual sentiments entertained by the parties drawing up and concurring in the language of that document. This language, it will be seen, is studiedly vague and uncertain, meaning either a full indorsement of Mr. Buchanan's policy, or no indorsement at all, just as the reader may be pleased to view it; his administration, it says, has "discomfited the designs of sectionalism at either extremity of the Union,"—a quasi-justification of Lecompton, which the friends of Mr. Buchanan may magnify as they please, but which the friends of Douglas will find no difficulty in reducing to a proper limit. The only other passage in the resolutions which could bear the construction of referring to this point is a statement that "while the Democracy of New-York are not indifferent to the merits and claims of distinguished statesmen of their own and sister States," they have still principles to sustain and objects to advance, from which they cannot be diverted, "to become subservient to the aspirations of statesmen, however able and worthy." Now this last quotation is verily a two-edged sword, which cannot wound the "aspirations" of Douglas on one side, without inflicting an equal detriment on the future hopes of the present Executive.

The truth is that these resolutions were drawn up by the friends of Mr. Buchanan, and just as strongly drawn as, in the judgment of the astute parties engaged in the work, the friends of Douglas could be brought or coaxed to endure. If a warmer plaster of Conventional applause had been tried, the raw wounds of the Little Giant's friends could never have endured the application. Surely it was much better for the Democracy to make this mutual concession on a subject not directly before them, than to split up after the unhappy example set them not many days before, by men who had no national difference at all so radical as that which exists between the Lecompton and Anti-Lecompton wings of the Democratic Party.

The protest and secession of Fernando Wood, are, as we have before said, mere acts of personal infatuation, chiefly hurtful to himself, Dickinson and Schell.

The friends of Mr. Buchanan have apparently triumphed, but not with so high a hand as to be able to refuse concessions; and they may now make a demand on the Executive for "all further possible help," which the Administration, we opine, will find it no easy matter to evade with justice. Had the party opposed to them gained an ascendency, strong resolutions indorsing Douglas and condemning Lecompton, it is understood, were already prepared for approval.

Disabilities of Aliens in Respect to Real Estate.—A correspondent calls attention to the statutes which disqualify aliens from holding or conveying real estate, as being useless, troublesome and mischievous, and suggests their repeal. We concur in his opinion of this matter. The statutes in question are not required by any considerations of public utility, and are founded upon the obsolete maxims of a by-gone age. Why should it be necessary that an alien should file with the Secretary of State a declaration of his intention to be naturalized, before he can be authorized to take and hold real estate? Until such declaration is filed he cannot take title to real property, either by purchase or by will. Any devise to such alien is void, and the property passes to the heirs-at-law. Now all such provisions are entirely uncalled for. They cause trouble, and, in some cases, defeat the intentions of testators. The general policy of our law is to make the acquisition of property open and full. If there is danger to our institutions from foreigners among us, that danger is certainly lessened, and not increased, by their becoming interested in the soil. And it is a noticeable fact that the political party reputed to be most unfriendly to aliens, has usually recommended the abrogation of the statutory restrictions referred to. We trust the Legislature, at its next session, may find time to consider this subject.

Why the Telegraph is Idle.—We are at last furnished with a reason why the Atlantic Cable is not working. The Company appears to have been taken by surprise in the successful laying of the long wire, and to have omitted provision for a stouter and stronger strand required at either terminus, to save the line from the dangers of shallow water. This heavy cable was only shipped from London, under the charge of Mr. Clifford, at the first of this month. His instructions were to make the substitution at the Valentia end forthwith, and then to proceed to Trinity Bay—a task requiring at least three or four weeks in the fulfillment. The London morning papers of Sept. 1 announce accordingly, that at the end of three weeks the line would be ready for public use, and that the London celebration would be reserved for that occasion.

This is direct and comprehensible—decidedly better than the apocryphal statements in regard to conflicting methods of telegraphy, with which the Press has been freely supplied. And, by the way, who furnished Mr. Cyrus W. Field with the dispatch read at the Crystal Palace, stating, under date of Sept. 1, that the "Directors were on their way to Valentia, and that the line was to be opened immediately?" The public has been imposed upon. Who is the impostor?

More Ticket-Swindling.—The California ticket-swindling operations are still going on, notwithstanding the frequent exposures of that iniquity. Mr. Alexander Boland and his two nephews, Alexander and Simeon Wheeler, appeared at the Mayor's Office, Thursday, to make complaint against Frank Fowler, who has a place at the corner of Chambers and West streets. Mr. Boland, accompanied by his nephews, came to the City from Oleander Upper Mills, Dane County, Wisconsin, found their way into Fowler's shop and purchased their passage-tickets for the California steamer of the 17th inst.—paying $175 each, or $525 in all. The tickets purported to be second-class cabin, but proved to be for the steerage only. The Mayor, on hearing the representations of the parties, sent Officer Olden to bring Fowler to his office, where the money was returned to the parties who had paid it, and the matter dropped.

Amusements.

Academy of Music.—Donizetti's opera of "Lucia di Lammermoor" was produced here last night, with a new distribution in two of the principal parts—Mme. Gassier being the Lucia, and Signor Stefani the Edgardo. The performance was a very even and excellent one, and gave abundant satisfaction to a full house. The music of Lucia lies easily within the compass of Madame Gassier's voice, even in the sestette where a note occurs which is often wanted for the comfort of the artist and of the audience. In the early part of the evening Mme. Gassier appeared to be laboring under an oppression of the chest—the result, probably, of a cold—but in the second she recovered her artistic precision and was good. The fresh quality of her voice was, as ever, the principal charm of her performance. Signor Stefani essayed a rôle which does not belong to the repertoire of the modern robusto, and accomplished prodigies of sweetness and force. The defect with the artist is, that he does not know the limits of his own powers. He acts with such fervor, and is so easily stimulated by applause, that he is very apt to go a step beyond the boundaries of true art, which should be always pleasing. In the sestette of the second act he exerted himself so palpably—and we may add so admirably—that the malediction scene lost half its power, and was weak precisely in those points where a conservative artist would have made it strong. We do not wish to detract from the grandeur of Signor Stefani's voice—which is unquestionably the finest we have ever heard in the City—nor from the earnestness—so unusual in tenors—with which he throws himself into the spirit of a situation. Only, where three acts are to be played, something should be saved for the third. Concerning the tearful finale to the opera, we will merely say, that it has been better given by Salvi and Mario, but by no one else. It was a little vigorous for a death scene, but it was none the less enjoyable for that.

There will be a matinée to-day, when "Lucrezia Borgia" will be played, with the regular artists of the Company, and Signor Guidi as the Gennaro.

Burton's Theatre.—Mme. Colson makes her third appearance to-night in the "Trovatore." The lady will be supported by Signors Brignoli and Amodio.

Wallack's Theatre.—Mr. Miranda, the tenor, takes his benefit here to-night. It is the last appearance of the troupe, and an excellent bill is provided. The second and third acts of the "Bohemian Girl" and the last act of the "Trovatore" are the attractions.

Operatic.—Mr. Ullmann, the lessee of the Academy of Music, was among the passengers by the Persia. He is full of grand schemes for the future, and has effected a number of engagements which will undoubtedly give him a monopoly of the operatic market. On Monday we shall be in a position to announce the artists for his forthcoming season.

City Items.

Fatal Accident at the New-York Hotel—Coroner's Inquest—Fall from a Window to the Pavement.—At a few minutes to 12 o'clock, on Thursday night, as Officer McDonald, of the Fifteenth Ward, was passing through Washington-place, near Broadway, he discovered a man lying senseless on the pavement opposite the New-York Hotel. The man was partly undressed, and he was immediately taken to the nearest drug store in Broadway. On inquiry the injured man proved to be Mr. William H. Manegault, a gentleman stopping at the New-York Hotel. As soon as it was ascertained who he was he was carried to his room in the Hotel, and Dr. Crane called to attend him. He remained insensible until about 1 o'clock yesterday morning, when he died. It is impossible to tell whether he accidentally fell from the window of his room or threw himself out, although it is generally believed that his death was the result of an accident. His room was on the third story, and in falling he struck against a balcony, breaking the upper railing in two. The deceased has been stopping several weeks at the hotel where the accident occurred.

Coroner Perry held an inquest in the case yesterday morning.

Mr. Hiram Cranston, the proprietor of the hotel, testified—That the deceased had been a guest at his hotel for several weeks; the last time he saw him previous to the accident was on Wednesday, at which time he was well; about 12 o'clock he heard that he had fallen from the window of his room, when he proceeded to the drug store where he had been carried; he had the deceased conveyed to his room, and medical aid called, and everything done that could be to restore him to consciousness, but without effect; the position in which the deceased was found indicated that he fell from the window of his room while leaning out of his window; everything in his room was in perfect order, and he believed, from the appearance of things, that no one could have been in the room with him when the accident occurred; he believed it was an accident, but, of course, it was impossible to say so positively.

Dr. G. B. Bowton testified—That the external marks on the body of the deceased were such as he would receive by falling from a window to the sidewalk.

The Jury rendered a verdict of "death by injuries caused by an accidental fall from a bedroom window of the New-York Hotel, Sept. 16, 1858." Mr. Manegault was 38 years of age, unmarried, and resided in Charleston, S. C. Since his arrival in the City he has been having a pretty "high time." On Wednesday evening he was robbed, and the supposed culprit arrested, but Mr. M. was unable to appear against the prisoner on Thursday morning, and the latter was accordingly discharged by the magistrate. The body will be taken to day to Charleston for interment.

Steam on Fourth-avenue.—The Aldermen's Committee, which has under consideration the petition for the repeal of the ordinance prohibiting the Harlem Railroad Company from running locomotives below Forty-second-street, met again yesterday at 2 P. M., and heard Messrs. Holmes, J. G. Sevier and Jordan L. Mott on behalf of the petitioners, and Messrs. George Phelps, B. M. Whitlock and W. W. Niles in opposition. The Committee adjourned sine die at about 6 o'clock, and will probably report at the next meeting of the Board.

Dr. Boynton's Lectures.

The introductory lecture, by Dr. Boynton, was given last evening, at the Cooper Institute, to an audience which completely filled the spacious hall.

The lecture was of an elementary character, and mostly devoted to Mechanical Astronomy. The law, said the Doctor, which governs the atom, governs the mass. All matter is governed by law. Law implies a law-giver; that law-giver implies intelligence, and for the infinite intelligence manifested in the works of creation, there could be no other name than God. The laws of matter, which are invisible, and not cognizant to the senses, are more real, substantial, and permanent than the matter which they control. Take a grain of salt; left to the law of its own construction, it will always form a cube. Break it up, dissolve it ten thousand times—left to itself, it will form a cube. Is not the invisible more substantial than the visible? Is not the soul, which animates the body, more real and lasting than the body itself?

The Doctor discussed the tendency of all bodies in which chemical changes take place, and which are held together by attraction and gravitation to form themselves into spheres, and he showed how this tendency was modified by the rotary motion given to the earth and the planets, transferring them into spheroids. The earth turns once in 24 hours, and is flattened 26½ miles. Jupiter rotates once in ten hours, and is flattened 6,000 miles. The flattening of Saturn is 7,500 miles. The effect of this law, however, was to give stability to the motion of the planets, for the axis of every rotating body would always remain through its shortest diameter. The existence and operation of these laws was illustrated by a series of practical experiments, which were at once beautiful and simple, and carried conviction to the mind of every one present.

Dr. Boynton closed by an eloquent description of the millions of heavenly bodies, with their groups, centres and cycles; and all moving forward in the realms of space, in an orbit so gradual that millions of years are required to complete one revolution—the whole evidencing the wonderful power of the Creator. The audience left the hall delighted with their evening's entertainment. The next lecture—the first on Geology proper—will be given on Monday evening.

A Duel that did not Take Place.—The Richmond South published "cards" from two belligerent parties, who came near fighting in a duel, but refrained. The individuals were Louis West and F. G. Claiborne. The latter writes from Danville, Va.:

> "In your paper of a recent date I find a card from a certain Louis West, in regard to a personal difficulty between him and myself. I confess very great surprise at such a card, because I had supposed from the late religious tendencies of this individual's mind, that he was at peace with all the world, if not with his God; but, from the mendacity and willful misrepresentations contained in his statement, I am bound to infer that he is now as far from the character of a Christian as he had before shown himself to be from that of a gentleman. It is very disagreeable to be under the necessity of appearing before the public in this way; and had Mr. Louis West restricted his lying to the locality of Chapel Hill, where the facts, as well as both of us, are known, I would have regarded any statement of his as a matter of the most superlative indifference; but as he has chosen to lie at large, I must be pardoned for noticing him. His card commences with a quibble, and proceeds to its inevitable climax."

SYRACUSE CONVENTION.

Last Scene in the Tragedy—Names of the Democratic "Bolters" as they Left the Room.

Syracuse, Thursday, Sept. 16, 1858.

The sudden and hasty flight made by Fernando Wood from the Convention has brought down on that unhappy gentleman the maledictions and invectives of the only class of Democratic politicians in the State not already engaged, either directly or indirectly, in that vivacious and exhilarating business. The Dickinson men, or old "Hards," as they are sometimes called, have not one word to say against the action of the Convention, or only speak in praise of the generosity which put three well-known Hards on a ticket, where the other side were in an avowed and tested ascendancy of more than three to one. But against Fernando Wood and his selfish policy of seeking personal safety by flight, the indurated and injured gentlemen protest with all the bitterness of despair. When they first heard his intention of not appearing before the Committee on Contested Seats, it seemed impossible of belief to them that a leader selected by Messrs. Dickinson and Schell should so far forget what was due to his supposed constituency, his allies, and those who had become mixed up in the quarrel through his representations, as to abandon without struggle, a contest in which so many had staked their political lives. They called on him; they remonstrated; they grew furious; but nothing could overcome his invincible terror of a public inquiry. Any man acquainted with the art of writing can get up credentials which would look very nice in a picture; but the Committee of one from each judicial district of the State, was not exactly the kind of body to be easily imposed on by mere certificates with no constituencies behind them, and authority claimed under organizations which could be proved to have no prescriptive or original power of existence.

Mr. Wood, therefore, was deaf to all entreaties, and declined to make his appearance before the Committee, assuring his few dubious admirers that "if they would but wait until the evening session they should then see sudden and hopeless calamity overtake their enemies." Not satisfied with this, but compelled to acquiesce in it, the Dickinson men entered the Hall at 7½ P. M., and sat together in a body to be prepared for united action. Mr. Wood had spoken so confidently of the stratagem he had elaborated for bringing "calamity" on the foe, that the more sanguine Binghamtonites began half to believe him; and this semi-credence was intensely heightened, a few minutes afterward, by the entrance of Fernando in person, his arms folded across his chest, his stride long and theatrical, the facial muscles fixed as if in permanent tetanus, and all the indications about him of a man who had made up his mind on a desperate course. Some asked was there a powder-magazine below the Hall? If so, and an electric wire to communicate therewith, he might possibly blow them all up together, and perish in the ruins!

As Fernando marched up the Hall, expectation stood on tip-toe "and the boldest held his breath for awhile." But when Mr. Wood drew forth from his tail-pocket a bit of paper, announcing that this was his "protest against the tyrannical action of the Convention and its Chairman," and that he, Fernando Wood, was about then and there withdrawing all his further patronage and presence from the deliberations of the Convention so condemned,—as this "ridiculous mouse" crept forth from the mountain so long in labor, natural reaction followed the strain of nerves and eyesight; laughter and derisive cheers burst forth from floor and galleries, and when Fernando, beckoning his delegation to follow, stalked slowly down the Hall, I never witnessed a more truly pitiable procession, nor saw so many men together exposed to such a withering cross-fire of laughter, jibes and drollery from their enemies, while bitterly assailed by the friends they were deserting for unmanly and undisciplined flight. The names of the "bolters" were as follows, and the Democrats of the State of New-York, represented by their best men, in their best Convention, should be cautioned that they have unluckily incurred the anger of Messrs. F. Wood, Billy Wilson, C. S. Woodruff, Weare Drake Parsons, Thomas McSpedon, J. C. Willett, William N. McIntyre, S. P. Russell, Dan. Young, Peter McKnight, Samuel Jackson, E. J. Hamilton, Wm. Coulter and Wm. J. Brisley, all of the City of New York, and some three or four provincials whose names I could not ascertain, after the most active inquiries; the delegates whose seats they contested, professing they had never before seen or heard of any such men in the localities from which the "Bolters" claimed to be returned.

HEAD-QUARTERS.

Regatta at Yorkville.

The fourth annual regatta of the Empire City Regatta Club, which was postponed from Thursday on account of the rain, came off at Conrad's Garden, Yorkville, yesterday afternoon. With the exception of a little too much wind, the weather was favorable for the occasion, and the attendance was respectable, though not as numerous as on previous annual races of the Club. There were four races, of five miles each, and fifteen boats entered for the various prizes. The rowing was very unequal, except on the last race, which was a sweepstakes for a silver cup, in which three boats entered, and was so narrowly contested as to revive the interest and raise the spirits of the spectators, and thus redeem the exhibition from what many, until then, were disposed to term a bore.

The management of the Regatta was admirable, and much credit is due to the President of the Club, Mr. Stephen Roberts, and other members, as well as to the large Police force in attendance, for the order and good arrangement everywhere observed, both on shore and in the river.

The following was the order of the races, with the names of boats entered in each, and the time of the winners:

First Race.—Four-oared boats. Entered—Experiment, Dan Bryant, Geo. J. Brown, and Jas. Riely, (Boston boat.) Won by Geo. J. Brown. Time—35 minutes, 50 seconds. Rowed by Henry Osborn, William Boggs, Peter O'Brien and W. H. Dexter.

Second Race.—Seventeen feet working boats. Entered, Ned, Lewis C. Meeks, Ed. Clyne, Empire City, Gywnegan. Won by Lewis C. Meeks, 43 minutes 54 seconds. Rowed by Wm. Windover and Andrew Latham.

Third Race.—Champion sculls. Entered—Cyrus W. Field, Vickey, Olivia Roberts, Jane, Wm. D. Logan. Won by Cyrus W. Field. Time—44 minutes 43 seconds. Rowed by Hugh Burns (Rappahannock.)

Fourth Race.—Sweepstakes for silver pitcher. Entered—Geo. J. Brown, Robert H. Allaire, Experiment. Won by Geo. J. Brown. Time—34 minutes 23 seconds. Manned same as in first race.

The prizes were as follows: First Race, $100, $25, $10. Second, $25, $10, $3. Third, $40, $15, $5. Fourth, silver cup.

In the last race which, as I before observed, was the only one that appeared to be contested with any kind of spirit, the winning boat, Geo. J. Brown, was closely followed through the entire five miles by the Robert H. Allaire, and she again by the Experiment, which it will be recollected won the race at Springfield last month.

We believe this is the first race ever won by the Robert J. Brown, and although she barely saved her laurels in the sweepstakes, yet as she won two out of the four races yesterday, we think she is fairly entitled to be called, for the present, the crack boat of the Empire Club.

Murder in the Five Points.

Last night, about 10½ o'clock, a murder was committed at No. 25 Baxter-st., in the grocery and liquor store of John Lewis, a German, the favorite resort of a number of thieves, loafers and vagabonds, of all sizes, shapes and colors, the blacks, however, largely predominating.

From the statements of Warren Lawrence, John Sewall and Joseph Sands, all negroes, it appears that Joseph Nichols, a desperate-looking negro, entered the store and called to the bar-keeper, who was sitting on a barrel outside of the counter, to give him a cigar. Another negro, named William Darling, was sitting alongside the bar-keeper, and turned to Nichols, and asked him in a gruff, surly manner, who he was addressing; to which Nichols replied it was not him, and that he did not know him. The bar-keeper then went to give the cigar to Nichols, and, as he did so, Darling stepped up and said, "Well, I know you well, and have had something in for you a long time," and, as he spoke, gave Nichols a severe blow in the face. Just as he struck the blow Nichols drew a sheath-knife he had in a belt, and stabbed Darling in the left breast, ripping him open in an awful manner.

Officer Allimon, who was patrolling on the other side of the street, ran over and arrested Nichols, and took him to the Sixth Ward Station-house, where Nichols stated the facts as given above. He said he was a sailor, and arrived from Cardiff, Wales, on Sunday last.

The wounded man was taken to the New-York Hospital, and expired a few minutes after arriving there. He was about 50 years of age, and was in the United States Navy nearly 30 years, but of late he has worked as a 'longshoreman. Nichols strenuously denies any previous acquaintance with Darling, and it is supposed he was taken for another person.

A Card.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Whereas a call, on recommendations of the New-York State Temperance Society, of a State Temperance Political Convention, to be held at Utica, on the 22d, has been issued and signed by six only of the Committee of Sixteen, this is to certify that the said call, signed only by a minority, is wholly unauthorized, and that no such Convention will be held.

JOHN MARSH,
Chairman of Committee.

SPORTING.

The Ring.

THE FIGHT FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP.

The approaching fight, to take place between MORRISSEY and HEENAN for $2,500 a side on the 20th [illegible], the first real battle for the Championship since the meeting between HYER and SULLIVAN in [illegible], of course, creates an unusual amount of excitement in the "sporting" world. MORRISSEY [illegible] is in his 28th year. He fights at about 180 pounds. His frame is very wiry and muscular. He is a man of temperate habits, and since he has been [illegible] his training exercises in the neighborhood of [illegible]burg, he has enjoyed perfect health. His trainers are BURNS and SHEPHERD, the latter an Englishman, recently arrived in this country, and the trainer of TOM SAYERS, the present champion of England. HEENAN is a fine, fresh young fellow. His weight is 14 stone and his height a trifle over six feet two inches. He is in his 24th year, and, therefore, in point of age, as well as in length of reach, he has the advantage over his opponent. He is under the care of JAMES CUSICK and AARON JONES, the celebrated opponent of TOM SAYERS. HEENAN pays due attention to his exercises, is in good trim and possesses an ample fund of confidence. MORRISSEY, however, is the favorite in betting. The fourth deposit of $500 a side was staked on Monday, the 6th of September. The last deposit of $500 a side will be staked on the [illegible] of October, being $5,000 in the hands of the stakeholder. The betting, we learn, is very heavy. In fact more money has been already wagered on this fight than on any other that has ever taken place in the United States.

Police Intelligence.

ROBBERY AT THE MERCHANTS' HOTEL—$15,000 IN NOTES AND STOCK CERTIFICATES DESTROYED.—A carpet-bag belonging to Mr. J. W. Lacy, a lumber dealer from Pennsylvania, stopping at the Merchants' Hotel in Cortlandt street, was stolen on Wednesday from the office of the hotel. The carpet-bag contained a number of certificates of railroad stocks, bonds, checks and notes, representing $15,000 in value, besides a silver watch, gold chain, bracelet and other minor jewelry. Three young Germans, named Philip [illegible], George Shafler and Karl Winch, were yesterday arrested at a target-shooting in Sixty-sixth-street, near Third-avenue, charged with the commission of the theft. At their boarding-house the carpet-bag was discovered, but the stock certificates and other papers had been destroyed. The jewelry was recovered. Justice BROWNELL committed the accused for trial. Winch has just completed a residence on the Island, and his companions are not unknown to the police.

ELDERLY GENTLEMAN ON A SPREE.—Joseph Goodnough, a man aged fifty, keeps a grocery-store at No. 573 Washington-street, and has a wife and several children. His years have not abated his love for good liquor and an occasional good spree. On Wednesday, having been drinking freely, he felt in jolly good humor, hired a carriage, and engaged two wild young girls, named Mary Brown and Mary [illegible], to take a ride with him. He drove out to Congress Hall, near Eighty-sixth-street, had a sham marriage performed with one of his female companions, had a good dinner and a general good time. On the way home the liquor began to exert its narcotic effects upon him, and while in this condition the girls fastened to his watch and a roll of bank bills he had in his possession. Goodnough disliked this kind of proceeding, and on Thursday had the two Marys arrested and taken before Justice QUACKENBUSH, who locked them up to answer for their ungracious conduct. The watch and money are still missing.

BURGLAR CAPTURED.—Charles Hawkins and James Don, the former of wham has been just completed a residence on the island, yesterday morning broke into the dwelling-house No. 54 Laurens-street, occupied by Mrs. Lacoste, and stole two gold watches and jewelry worth $200 altogether. Mr. Lacoste heard the culprits as they were going away and gave an alarm, which started the Police after them. The two robbers, after an exciting chase, were captured, and the stolen property secured. Justice CONNOLLY committed them for examination. Four young fellows, giving their names as James Hunter, George Godwin, Franklin Kaster and James Smith, were detected at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, attempting to break into different stores in Division street. The quartette was arrested by the Tenth Ward Police and taken before Justice STEERS, who locked them up for trial. A jimmy was found secreted in Godwin's sleeve.

IDENTIFICATION OF BURGLARS.—The two burglars arrested two nights ago in Brooklyn have been identified as noted operators in the skeleton-key and jimmy line in this City. They are known by the names of James Brady and "Sukey." Brady is wanted to answer for a burglary in Paterson, N. J. He still carries a pistol-ball in his body, which an officer shot at him before his late capture in Brooklyn.

ALLEGED ASSAULT WITH A SLUNG-SHOT.—Charles Lafossa, a Hungarian, was committed yesterday to Jefferson Market Prison, for an alleged assault with a slung-shot upon Mr. J. Kellamy, of No. 9 Perry-street. Mr. Kellamy says that the accused struck him several times.

ASSAULT BY RUFFIANS.—On Thursday evening, Mr. C. F. Larkins, of No. 99 Avenue D, was standing on the corner of Twenty-sixth-street and Second-avenue, waiting for a car, when he was suddenly assaulted by three ruffians, knocked down and cruelly beaten, rendering him insensible. This occurred at 8 o'clock, and no policeman was about, and no arrests were made.

Fires.

IN FORTY-SIXTH-STREET.—At 2 o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in a small wooden stall in Forty-sixth-street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues, owned by JOHN DIXON. The entire stall was consumed, and a horse valued at $100, belonging to a Mr. BARTLETT. The total loss was $150, and uninsured.

IN HUDSON-STREET.—At 10 o'clock yesterday morning, a slight fire occurred in BEECHER's coffee and spice mills, No. 584 Hudson-street. The fire was soon extinguished, the damage, principally by water, being about $100. Insured.

Brooklyn Items.

THE RAG-PICKERS AGAIN.—During Thursday night a large quantity of bedding, supposed to have been thrown from vessels lying at Quarantine, was washed ashore at Bay Ridge and vicinity. By daybreak yesterday morning the beach was lined with rag-pickers, who, when discovered by the Police, were busily engaged in removing the property. They were driven off, and a sufficient force was placed on duty to prevent the bedding from being removed.

OFFICIAL.—Kelsey's-alley has been fumigated.

NEW SCHOOL-HOUSE—A new school-house connected with the Universalist Church, corner of Fulton-avenue and Canton-street, has recently been completed. The building will accommodate 400 scholars.

CHANGE OF NAME.—The name of the Mechanics' Bank, Eastern District of Brooklyn, will be changed to Manufacturers' Bank, Oct. 1 next.

HEAVY DAMAGES CLAIMED.—An action has been commenced against the Long Island Railroad Company to recover damages for the killing of WM. H. HAMMOND, Esq., on the 19th of June last. The amount claimed is $20,000.

ATTEMPT TO ROB A DRY GOODS STORE.—About 11 o'clock, Thursday night, two burglars made a desperate attempt to rob the dry goods store of HENRY P. MORGAN, No. 285 Fulton-street, but were frustrated by two clerks who sleep in the store. At the hour above named one of the clerks was absent, and when one is absent he gains admission by giving a peculiar whistle to the one inside, who thereupon opens the door. This the burglars evidently knew, for it was by this means they effected an entrance. The clerk who opened the door was instantly seized, tied and put into the cellar, when the burglars went to selecting goods for removal. While thus engaged, the absent clerk arrived and gave the signal. The door was opened by the burglars who attempted to serve him in the same way they had the other clerk. But he proved to be too powerful, and manfully resisted them. Finding that their object was likely to be defeated, one of the burglars fired a pistol, the ball from which just grazed the clerk's arm, but did not cause him to let go his hold. The burglars, after struggling a while longer, concluded to give up the contest and made a rapid retreat. The names of the clerks are WM. BENNETT and SAMUEL MURPHY.

ACCIDENT.—A few days ago a boy, ten years old, named MAURICE CORNWELL, residing at No. 417 Fulton-avenue, fell from a tree to the side-walk and sustained such injuries that it is feared he will not recover.

THE LUDLOW-STREET HOMICIDE.—An inquest was commenced yesterday at Bellevue Hospital, in the case of ANN KENNEDY, the Irish woman who came to her death from alleged violence at the hands of a German named BERNARD KERNAN. Several witnesses were examined, but no new facts were elicited. The investigation will be resumed to-day.

THE TRUSTEES OF THE EVERGREENS TO THE LOT-OWNERS AND THE PUBLIC.—A statement of the origin and history of this institution, of its condition and prospects, seems necessary at this time, to correct unfounded statements made by individuals and the Press.

In the year 1849 the attention of certain persons was directed to the ground now occupied by the Evergreens, as a proper place, from its central position and natural beauties, for a rural cemetery.

As New-York grew up town, the difficulty of access to Greenwood through the business part of the City, became seriously felt, and its distance from the residences of the City every year became greater.

The part of Brooklyn then known as Williamsburg and Bushwick had no cemetery of a proper character easily accessible.

Actuated by these views, a party of gentlemen agreed to loan to any cemetery there established a sufficient amount of money wherewith to found such an institution. With funds obtained from them the grounds, comprising over 200 acres, were, in the years 1849, 1850, 1851 and since, purchased, and the necessary improvements made, so as to start the institution favorably.

How was the Cemetery incorporation to repay or to secure to be repaid those who advanced this money? It had no money and could have none except from the sale of burial plots and graves, which must, necessarily, be a gradual and slow process.

It was determined to issue bonds for an amount which would probably equal one-half the value of the land by the time the bonds matured.

The bonds were made payable at different years from 1860 to 1890, as it was supposed the receipts of the institution would enable it to pay them—a few with interest and by far the larger portion with the interest added in forming the principal.

This accounts for the apparent large amount of bonds. Any one can calculate the present value of these bonds and he will find that the whole amount does not equal a sum which the lands owned by the Cemetery would sell for to-day, if they should be sold for other than cemetery purposes.

Statements made in the papers that one Trustee had bought a part of the land for a small sum and sold it to the Cemetery for a large sum, has no other foundation in truth than that bonds, as above stated, payable from 16 to 40 years, were given in payment.

Those gentlemen who contributed their money have never taken any cash from the Cemetery.

One-half of the net cash receipts of the Cemetery, as founded by the general act of incorporation not furnishing a sufficient amount to beautify and adorn the Cemetery properly, almost all of the holders of land bonds released to the Cemetery the amount of interest paid to them and accepted in payment land bonds which had been given by several large holders to the Cemetery for its use.

So far from this being any speculation, every action shows an entire absence of selfishness and a regard for the prosperity of the institution above all other interests.

The same amount of money laid out in real estate at that spot, at that time, would to-day produce much more than the par value of the Bonds.

Whatsoever may be the number and the amount of the Bonds, they are no lien whatever on the Cemetery lands; every burial lot sold has been, is, and will be, free and clear of and from, every kind of incumbrance whatever. In no event can lots or lands be sold for debts of the Cemetery or individual owners.

The probable receipts of the institution will leave a surplus, after paying the Bonds, of nearly a million of dollars. The present deeds reserve a quit rent of a dollar a year, as a fund to ornament the grounds for all future time.

The financial condition of the Cemetery, made up to the end of the fiscal year, will be presented at the annual election, and will, when printed, be sent to every known lot-owner's address.

The Trustees think it proper to add a brief explanation of an occurrence which has recently attracted the attention of the public, and subjected the Company to much abuse, under which they have remained silent hitherto.

One of the rules of the Cemetery (as also of Greenwood, and it is believed, all other Cemeteries near New-York,) provides that any workman employed on lots who shall violate the rules of the Cemetery shall not be permitted afterwards to work on the grounds. Being informed that a workman so employed had repeatedly and persistently violated rules, cutting down trees and otherwise injuring the grounds, and that when warned, he defied the officers and declared his intention to continue his depredations as he pleased, the officers forbade his entrance to the grounds.

All of the difficulty, the public meetings, and numberless libelous statements in the newspapers during the past two months, have originated with parties who were interested with this workman, and who desire to compel the Trustees to withdraw this prohibition and repeal the regulation of which all lot-owners will perceive the importance. The public Press have been misled by interested statements, and have unintentionally aided in the injurious attacks made on the officers.

It has even been intimated that the officers had interested motives in securing work for themselves, an idea which a reference to the published book of rules will show is utterly false and impossible.

The Trustees regard themselves as the custodians of a great and a solemn trust, and so long as it remains in their hands, they purpose to manage it with pure reference to the interests of lot-owners, and the preservation of the quiet, beauty and fitness for its purposes, of a vast and rapidly-filling Cemetery.

On financial and all other points they invite the fullest scrutiny and examination, satisfied that the lot-owners and the public will fully sustain their course.

SAM'L E. JOHNSON, President of the Evergreens.
EDWARD COPLAND, Treasurer.

This work has grown out of a six months' tour in India, just before the outbreak of the recent mutiny. The materials were principally derived from letters intended only for the perusal of the author's family. He has been induced to give his observations a more permanent form and a wider circulation, both on account of the interest which has been excited in the subject by the events of the last year and because, considering the size and population of the Indian Peninsula, its immense capabilities of production and the important position it may hereafter hold in the economy and commerce of the world, it certainly has not hitherto attracted in this country its due share of attention.

AS THE DREAD BOHAN UPAS TREE

Showers death on all around,
Covering as far as eye can see,
With victims all the ground,

So LYON'S POWDER shaken o'er
Roach, bed-bug, ant or flea,
Gives them a pang ne'er felt before,
And kills them instantly.

The ATLANTIC with the present number completes its first year. Its publication was commenced in a season of unexampled depression; but its success has more than equaled the expectations of the publishers; and the character it has acquired for ability, candor, spirit and variety, it is believed, fully redeems the promises made on its behalf.

The First Volume, consisting of seven numbers, ended in May last. The Second Volume, also containing seven numbers, will end with the December issue, in which the Index will be given. Hereafter the volumes will begin with January and July.

The pages of the Atlantic are stereotyped, and back numbers can be supplied.

From the Philadelphia Item.

This is a work of masterly power and intense interest. Its opening passages abound with the imagery of an epic poem, reminding us of Milton's grand conceptions. The leading character is a splendid ideal, the scenes and places of whose career are depicted with surprising ability and analytic skill; while those of the heroine of the narrative are portrayed with marvelous power and scenic effect. The whole work is eminently characteristic in its plot, classical and elevated in its diction, and exemplary in its moral tone. We have not had a production for a long time, so original in its cast, so spirit stirring and novel in its development, and so brilliant in its style. It cannot fail of arresting the attention of the public in an unusual degree; for although not of the same class, it is no less fresh and exciting in its character than the world-renowned Bronte novels."

INSTRUCTION.

MOUNT WASHINGTON COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE, No. 218 4th-st., (entrance No. 154 Macdougal-st.,) on Washington-square, opened its Sixteenth Academic year on Monday, Sept. 13, 1858.

This is a Private High School, furnishing the pupil with a solid and finished education. Numerous counting-houses of this City, as well as many colleges, can testify to the thoroughness with which pupils of this Institution have, during the past fifteen years completed their academic course. The location is unsurpassed. The Principals, who devote themselves to supervision and instruction, erected and arranged the building expressly for the institution. They employ ten accomplished professors and teachers.

The rooms and furniture have been thoroughly renovated and a stage is employed daily to convey small boys at a distance to and from the school.

Students preparing for the Sophomore Class of College have just commenced the Freshman Course. Classes in Surveying and higher Mathematics generally are in process of formation. Those in French, German, Spanish, Book-keeping, Commercial Arithmetic, Penmanship, Drawing and Painting are already arranged.

One of the Principals takes special charge of the younger scholars, who are received under superior advantages at seven years of age. An effectual method for acquiring a correct use of English and of eradicating all errors in spelling is in successful operation.

The building is well ventilated throughout, and pupils of all the departments enjoy at the recesses cheerful open-air exercise in the retired playground of Washington square.

Parents are particularly invited to visit this unique establishment during its daily sessions, and witness the character and mode of the instruction imparted. Circulars procured at the Institute and at the Broadway bookstores contain full particulars. Acquaintances of its present patrons are referred to them for reliable information.

M., for a loan of five hundred thousand dollars, ($500,000,) in money, payable as follows:

10—Ten per cent. on the 5th day of October next, which first installment the Company will retain without issuing Bonds therefor until the last installment is paid.
20—Twenty per cent. on the 1st day of November next.
20—Twenty per cent. on the 1st day of December next.
10—Ten per cent. on the 1st day of January, 1859.

10—Ten per cent. on the 1st day of April, 1859.
10—Ten per cent. on the 1st day of May, 1859.

For each installment except the first, Bonds will be issued, with proper adjustment of interest, when payments are made; or payments may be made earlier by notifying the Treasurer of the Company thereof, at the time when the first payment is made.

The Construction Bonds now offered are in sums of $500 and $1,000 each, to be dated Oct. 1, 1858, having twenty-five years to run, bearing 8 per cent. interest, payable semi annually in New-York, being a part of an issue of one million of dollars which may be made, and secured by a first mortgage and trust deed to John M. Forbes, Henry P. Kidder, and John N. A. Griswold, Trustees, of 40 miles of railroad and its appurtenances and more than 200,000 acres of valuable land in Iowa, covering also the first section of 35 miles of road from Burlington to Skunk River, which section is subject to liens amounting to $650,000. The proceeds of the lands constitute a sinking fund for the purchase and extinguishment of these Bonds; and by the terms of said mortgage and trust deed they are receivable at par in payment for any of said lands.

This issue will secure the completion of the Road to Ottumwa, in the Des Moines Valley, (a central point for the business of Southern and Western Iowa,) early next year.

Further information may be obtained at the office of the Company, or from its late report.

Other things being equal, a preference will be given to the smaller bids made by our stockholders, who are especially invited to share in the loan, the Company reserving to themselves the right to consider the responsibility of the parties making the proposals, as well as the rate offered. With these exceptions, they will award the loan pro rata to the highest bidder.

TRIESEMAR PROTECTED BY ROYAL Letters Patent of England, and secured by the Seals of the Ecole de Pharmacie de Paris, and the Imperial College of Medicine, Vienna. TRIESEMAR No. 1 is a remedy for relaxation, spermatorrhea, and exhaustion of the system. TRIESEMAR No. 2 effectually, in the short space of three days, completely and entirely eradicates all traces of those disorders which copaiva and cubebs have so long been thought an antidote for, to the ruin of the health of a vast portion of the population. TRIESEMAR No. 3 is the great Continental remedy for that class of disorders which unfortunately, the English physician treats with mercury, to the inevitable destruction of the patient's constitution, and which all the sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove. TRIESEMAR Nos. 1, 2 and 3 are alike devoid of taste or smell, and of all nauseating qualities. They may lie on the toilet table without their use being suspected. Sold in tin cases, and divided in separate doses, as administered by Velpeau, Lalleman, Roux, Ricord, &c., &c. Price $3 each, or four cases in one for $9, which saves $3, and in $27 cases. Sold by Dr. H. A. BARROW, No. 194 Prince-st., a few blocks west of Broadway, New-York. Immediately on receipt of the amount, Dr. B. will forward the $9 cases of TRIESEMAR and the large sized carriage paid, thus insuring genuine European preparations. The $3 cases also sent, but not free of carriage. Consultations as usual, from 11 A. M. till 2 P. M., and from 4 till 8 P. M., at 157 Prince-st., a few blocks west of Broadway.

DR. WATSON HAS FOR A LONG SERIES of years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated a vast number of cases with a success which has won for him the confidence of the public. The remedies are mild, and there is no interruption to business or change of diet. Dr. Watson receives patients in separate consulting rooms from 8 A. M. to 8 P. M., at No. 459 Broome st., second block west of Broadway.

DR. WATSON'S WORK, THE CAUSE AND CURE, issued simultaneously in London and New-York, is the only one which clearly explains the nature and mode of treatment of the VENEREAL DISEASE in all its different forms; but treats also in full of SPERMATORRHŒA, or Seminal Weakness, and Premature Exhaustion, the result of early indiscretion, excess, or other causes. Anatomical plates of a superior kind, and drawings of every form of disease. Price $1, post paid. "Dr. WATSON'S Work has been written by a person of great practical knowledge, and we cordially recommend it."—Medical Journal.

Sold by the Author, as above; also by J. W. JUDD, No. 222 Broadway, and by CHARLES MILLER, No. 436 Broadway, New-York.

RICORD'S, VELPEAU'S, CIVIALE'S, ACTON'S CURLING'S, and the Venereal Hospital Practice, of Paris and London, by Dr. LARMONT. As some persons afflicted with Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Primary and Constitutional Syphilis, Nervous Debility, Seminal Emissions, Impotency, &c., may not be aware of the fact, he takes this medium of informing them that he is the only graduate in this City who is exclusively treating and curing those diseases, and whose connection with the European hospitals enables him to adopt the latest and most radical treatment, curing the oldest and most severe cases, at No. 82 Mercer st., corner of Spring, opposite St. Nicholas Hotel, from 10 A. M. till 9 P. M., except Sundays, unless by appointment. The Doctor's MEDICAL ADVISER AND MARRIAGE GUIDE, nearly 400 pages, 100 picture illustrations, is $1. Sold and mailed also by J. W. JUDD, No. 222 Broadway, New-York. It gives the advertised medicines, and should be seen by the married, single and the afflicted, before adopting any treatment, as it fully exposes the charlatans infesting this and other cities.

We commend Dr. LARMONT to the afflicted.—Courrier des Etats Unis, Staats Zeitung, Day Book, Atlas, &c.

Its certain effect in subduing the most desperate cases of constipation and dyspepsia, and in restoring the stomach and bowels to the normal condition, will astonish the stoutest unbeliever. The crackers are manufactured from "Warren's Ervalenta," as sold in the United States for years past. References given to, and certificates of the most respectable and distinguished persons shown, who earnestly testify to their great efficacy. Manufactured only by the subscriber, and sold at his cracker bakery. Price 30 cents per pound. Will soon be for sale also by respectable grocers generally. Directions accompany each parcel. DR. MAGNIN'S LUCINA CORDIAL, OR ELIXIR OF LOVE.—This delightful and positive invigorant of the human system is fast superseding all other remedies; in fact, when its virtues become fully known, it will be the only remedy in use. Its action on the nervous system and reproductive organs is most extraordinary, allaying all over-excitement, and infusing into the nervous organization that degree of tension which is requisite to give the human system the enjoyment of its full powers, both mentally and physically. As an appetizer it is equally remarkable; assimilating with the gastric juices of the stomach, it assists them in more readily dissolving all nutritious substances, and converting them into pure and wholesome blood; thus the digestion is improved, and the whole framework of man moves on in a more vigorous and harmonious manner thereby. Price $3 per bottle, or two bottles for $5. Principal office No. 203 Fulton-st., New-York. DR. MAGNIN.

$500 REWARD.—DR. JEFFRIES' ANTIDOTE, a specific mixture for the cure of gonorrhœa, gleet, strictures, and similar disorders. It makes a speedy cure without the least restriction of diet drink, exposure or change in application to business. Further—the disease cannot be contracted if a dose of the Antidote is taken when exposed. Repeated experiments and long experience have proved that it will radically cure any case which can be produced. Price $1 per bottle. C. B. RING, General Agent, No. 192 Broadway, New York. Sold by C. G. GREEN, southeast corner of Atlantic and Henry sts., Brooklyn; COLLENDER & CO., Philadelphia; REDDING & CO., Boston; W. L. JENISON, Albany.

DR. HUNTER—NO. 3 DIVISION-ST., PERFORMS THE GREATEST CURES EVER MADE. THE ONLY SECURITY AGAINST HUMBUGS AND THE EFFECTS OF DISEASES, IS TO APPLY TO HIS OLD DISPENSARY ESTABLISHED IN 1834.

Dr. Hunter's Vade Mecum gives Ricord's, Velpeau's, Lallemand's and all the faculty prescriptions and treatment; all the advertised remedies; is full of colored plates, 400 pages, and is the most valuable work out. It should be seen by the afflicted, before adopting any treatment, as it fully exposes the charlatans infesting this and other cities. To be had of the Doctor, No. 3 Division st., where his great remedy, Hunter's Red Drop can be had genuine only. $1 per vial. Advice gratis. He rescues more young men from destruction every 10 days than any other 10 M. D.'s in 10 years. It is deplorable to witness some of the cases that are presented to Dr. Hunter, where the disease has been driven into the system by quacks to break out again in the form of spots and ulcers on the body, pains in the joints and throat, night sweats and emaciation. STRICTURE.—Dr. Hunter has discovered a new process by which he can cure the worst forms of stricture in from two to three weeks. Constitutional debility, brought on by a secret habit indulged in by young men, effectually cured. A word to the wise is sufficient.

SPRINGFIELD AND THE HORSE FAIR.

OUTSIDE SCENES.

From Our Own Reporter.

WARRENER'S HOTEL, SPRINGFIELD,
Wednesday Night, Sept. 15, 1858.

"Glorious day, Sir—excited multitude—fine women—splendid 'orses—rhapsodic quacks—eloquent—demm'd—very!" In such style would the immortal Jingle, if he were yet alive—(excuse the Hibernicism)—give vent to his surcharged feelings, if he could only see the Springfield fair-grounds as they appeared to-day. The scene would warrant his most effective adjectives. It was one of no little interest, and of an incalculable amount of pleasure. The weather, thus far, has been propitious, though to-night, I am sorry to say, it looks forbidding. The collection of horses of all ages, sizes, capacities and colors, stands unrivaled by any similar exhibition that has ever taken place here, or, so far as I know, elsewhere on this continent. The town has been inundated with strangers from all parts of the Union, and not a few from abroad. The hotels are crammed from attic to cellar, and the proverbial discomfort of lying as thick as three in a bed, is here experienced to the letter. Nay, at this juncture, the reality exceeds that, for the man is supremely felicious who gets a bed at all.

Springfield, from what I have seen of it, is a very sedate, comfortable, self-satisfied sort of a place. Ordinarily, however, I should regard it as not an extremely lively one. It has not the appearance of a town per se, but looks rather like a quiet suburb of some large city. No evidences of confirmed poverty are to be seen anywhere. The aspect, on every hand, is one of comfort and well-to-do-ism. There are no dark and noisome alleys, no narrow, dirty lanes, no stinking, festering back-slums. All is semi-rural and snug.

But withal, Springfield is not the spot in which I should like to spend a life-time of Sundays, the piety of the people seems so very remarkable. There is hardly a dead wall or an old post to be encountered through the leading streets, on which the visitor does not behold a holy hand-bill twitting him with his ungodliness. One of these, which deals out fire and brimstone in immeasurable quantities to the drunkard, is affixed to an awning-post in front of my hotel, and stares the guests out of countenance every time they pass out or in. Another, on the post adjoining, informs the reader, in imposing capitals, that "Swearers work cheap," and then goes on to relate a sanctified joke, the point of which is not particularly apparent. A third contains an extract ostensibly from Dr. CHANNING, which characterizes the theatre as an accumulation of all immoral influences. Even the local newspapers are made the medium of these godly reproofs. In a morning journal lying before me, I find them in the advertising page, interspersed with notices of "Machinery," "Hair Restoratives," "Female Pills," and "Chances for Business."

TITMARSH, in his Tour in Ireland, if I remember rightly, speaks of a village where some of the inns would not receive travelers on a Sunday, where every bedroom in the hotel where he stopped contained a testament with an injunction, on the part of the landlord, to consider this world itself as only a fleeting abode. I do not think they carry their pious scruples so far in Springfield—that is, if the traveler be good for the reckoning. Otherwise, I dare say, it would be folly for him to look for anything but the most unflinching rigor. I called one evening at one of the principal hotels and inquired for the bar-room. The young gentleman at the desk, to whom I addressed the question, looked up, retreated, and in a tone of stern rebuke, informed me that they kept no bar-room. I fled precipitately, yet it is quite probable that if a lodger there feels any inclination to indulge "in a little something," all that is necessary for him to do is simply to retire to his apartment, give orders to any extent, and guzzle to his heart's content. That may be the quieter way of doing the thing, but it is not the manliest. It looks like skulking. A friend of mine lately told me that once, accompanied by a friend of his, he visited the house of a mutal acquaintance in the country—I need not say where, but it was not in Massachusetts. The host was a fine old fellow, and set no limits to his hospitality. During the evening the bottle passed somewhat freely, but not beyond the limits of a legitimate indulgence. My friend's friend got good-humored, and perpetrated some harmless little brusqueries of expression which, at the time, excited a good deal of fun. Next day the jocular gentleman left, and the other remained for tea with the ladies. His report of the estimate formed of the morals and chances of salvation of him who had just departed, as these were talked of over the evangelical bohea, and the righteous pan-cakes, was distressing beyond belief—but, by way of addenda to the narrative, he statas that on that same morning he had met the servant on the lobby, hastening into the old lady's room with a bottle which bore the significant inscription, "Bininger's Genuine London Gin." I don't like Tartuffe, else I should be driven into comparisons.

This digression, or aggression, whichever you please, being brought to an end, let us return to the Fair.

The ground, the crowd, the horses, the gayety and the din have been described to you by an abler pen than mine. It is useless for me to speak of the display to-day in detail; suffice it to say that it was admirable in every respect; that the arrangements were well designed, and, what is better, effectively carried out; that there was no accident or casualty of any kind to mar the general success; that the horses did their best at running, the crowd at admiring, the judges at deciding, and I at playing the critic, in which I failed most egregiously. That portion of the performance which pleased me most was the exhibtion of saddle-horses, and a spirited race, in which two ladies took part. They rode with a dexterity, and grace, and abandon, which would do credit to the amphitheatre. After the horses had curvetted, and pranced, and turned, and went through various other evolutions as tests of training and of gentleness, they formed into line across the track, opposite to the Judges' stand, the word was given, and off they started helter-skelter. The ladies dashed along gallantly. On the second and concluding heat, one of them was hard pressed by a colored gentleman, whose jockeying was amazingly fine. But the lady was determined she should not be vanquished; so she whipped and spurred most energetically, and dashed passed the winning-pole several lengths ahead, amid the plaudits of the multitude, looking eagerly on. This concluded the programme for the day, though the exhibition did not close with it.

A fine green-space south of the half-mile ring was consecrated to the god of commerce, and that other all-powerful deity who presides over the destines of the stomach. Both had numerous votaries. Of all the queer characters in this world, the Yankee peddler is the queerest. He cheats you to your face, and with a grace that is irresistible, for you know he is chuckling in his sleeve at you all the while. Here is a fellow selling a small bottle, not half the size of your little finger, and filled with a solution of caustic potash, probably, for the small sum of 25 cents. He asseverates, with an emphasis positively startling, that it will "instantaneously remove warts and excrements from cows, men and cattle," and to convince you of this, he draws forth a fiddle excruciatingly out of tune, and plays and sings the exquisite ballad known as "Polly, won't you ki me O!" or something else of the same sort. Then, to make assurance doubly sure, he proffers to experiment on any gentleman afflicted with a wart, and with the point of his penknife picks up out of a box a specimen, which he declares, most solemnly, is one of a thousand or thereabouts that he removed the day before. Thereupon, a gentleman, obviously from the rural districts, steps forward, produces his thumb, on which a hideous excresence appears. The operator uncorks one of his little phials, applies some of the contents to the wart, informs the patient that the application must remain untouched for eight minutes, (in spite of his previous declaration that it would effect a cure immediately,) kindly asks some gentleman with a watch to mark the time, and by way of making the interval pass as pleasantly as possible, again takes up the fiddle and executes another tune, over and over and over again, until the time and the patience of the crowd is well nigh exhausted. Then after a series of highly-wrought observations, and some fearful flourishes of a surgeon's knife, he cuts off that portion of the wart which had been sufficiently seared, and, with a look of triumph, boldly proclaims that the job is done. The countryman, after a great deal of fumbling, hands up his quarter, and goes off with his purchase; whereupon the rogue of a peddler, with an impudent candor that is really ludicrous, shouts at the top of his voice, "Sold another gentleman for a quartyer of a dollyar, and another soul made happy!"

A little farther on we come to a handsome canopied stand from which there holds forth a stout, florid, fluent, moustached gentleman of middle age whose eyes twinkle with roguery and fun. This is the celebrated Professor STAGGERS, whose world-renowned balsam has cured millions of rheumatism, fever and ague, gravel and consumption. He plays the fiddle also, and sings droll songs inimitably.

After the music, he expatiated on the virtues of his medicine, (only twenty-five cents a bottle,) and has a couple of confederates, who come forward to buy, and answer certain prearranged queries as to the effects the mixture has had in the previous cases in which they or their friends had used it. Of course their accounts are of the most satisfactory character, and then the Professor appeals to the crowd, and boldly inquires who dare gainsay his word after such irrefragible proof. Deluded by this farce, some victim presents himself and his quarter, and carefully stows away the bottle. The Professor varies the entertainments by tricks of slight of hand, and again takes to spouting. When last I saw him he was singing a song, and another fellow was hawking the ballad among the listeners.

Then some of the boys came forward and asked him to say something about his politics. With this request he readily complied. "Now, look you here, boys," said he, "it is too late for me to make a speech this evening, but I tell you, before this fair closes, I am agoing to make you one that will be worth hearing. Boys, I am going to vote this Fall for ERASTUS D. BEACH, the Democratic candidate for Governor and, what is more, I tell you that my vote will be one of those that will elect him. [A voice, 'No Sir.'] Yes, Sir; I'm a true American, and last year voted the American ticket. I have made more political speeches in this State within the last five years, than any other man in it. Last year I lectured in nearly every town in Rhode Island. But do you just believe this, I am going to vote for ERASTUS D. BEACH, and he is going to be Governor. Mind that. Look at them Republican States of Maine, Vermont and New-Hampshire. What have they done? Why, they have passed laws preventing me, a poor peddler, who have spent the last three years of my life in gettin' up this medicine the greatest that was ever invented for the cure of rheumatism, fever and ague, headaches, gravel and consumption; and, gentlemen, any of you can get a bottle of it now, just before I close up, for the sum of one quarter. Every man and woman ought to carry a bottle of it in their pocket, and keep a bottle at home. I say, boys, that these three Republican States have passed a law by which I, a poor pedlar, cannot go into any of them to sell my splendid medicine, that would do them more good than all their money would do me, without subjecting myself to a fine of $50, and imprisonment if I haven't got the money. Now, boys, I go for Free States and equal rights, and free trade, and I'm a going for ERASTUS D. BEACH, too, and we'll beat BANKS, and we'll beat the Americans, for I'll never vote for the American ticket so long as they jine in with the Wooly-heads. That I won't, boys; I don't care who says to the contrary.

An excitable individual in the crowd advanced and told the orator that BANKS would be elected by 60,000 majority.

He will, will he? says the Professor. Well, now, I know by your countenance that you are an honest and an intelligent man, and—look here, boys—wait a minute, my friend—I'll give you proof of it. Last Fall BANKS got only 60,000 votes altogether, and this Fall he is going to get a d—d great deal less.

The imprudent Republican collapsed immediately and the crowd cheered heartily at his discomfiture.

The orator wound up by reiterating that his principles was to make money; that he could not do that in the Free Republican States, and therefore he had made up his mind to vote with the party that had always stood up for free trade and equal rights. He then packed up his traps and departed.

One of the most frequent commodities to be encountered at the Fair, is a machine that pares, cores and slices apples simultaneously. The means resorted to for the purpose of disposing of these things are multitudinous. You meet them at every turn, in carts, on stands, and hawked about by itinerant touters, who sing, fiddle, tell extravagant jokes, and adopt every imaginable mode of attracting a crowd, and invariably wind up with a rigmarole about "the new patent apple-parer."

The devotees of the spectacular drama are not wanting. There is here a very small lady in a very diminutive tent, on which is painted the words, "The Great Female Drummer—only nine years of age." Then there is an immense ox in another tent. Adjoining it is one in front of which appears a hand-bill, setting forth the fact that within may be seen the greatest wonder of the age, a cow with four thriving calves, to whom she gave birth on the 11th of June last—a certificate, giving names and dates, being set forth wtih imposing particularity. Just alongside this is the great wax-work exhibition of Professor STABINI, containing a representation of the murder of Dr. BURDELL, likenesses of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM, her daughters, AUGUSTA and HELEN, Mr. ECKELS, Master SNODGRASS, and, last of all, that blessed baby—also full and accurate figures of Professor WEBSTER and Dr. PARKMAN, of JAMES MAGEE, the Boston murderer, standing beneath the gallows tree, and around his neck a piece of the wery identical rope with which he was strangulated, and also one of the greatest curiosities of the hanimal kingdom, a sheep born with three legs.

It is told that TOM SHERIDAN once said to his father, "I want to go into a coal mine, in orner to say that I have been there." "Well, then, say so," replied the admirable parent. I determined to act on TOM's principle without heeding the father's advice, and, at last, hesitatingly, ventured my fifteen cents for a ticket, which I bought from the distinguished professor himself—(whose accent reminded me strongly of a region within the sound of Bowbells—and handed it to a gentleman with a sallow complexion, and a great display of watch-chain, who presided at the door. I entered. On one side was the orchestra, composed of a hand-organ and a drum, which the performers, two boys, played alternately, and were occasionally relieved by the Professor, who now and then took a turn at the organ. The figures—Oh, shade of Tussaud!—were filthy wax-work representations of Chinese, bought at a sacrifice, doubtless, of some insolvent grocer during the panic. They were dressed in dirty muslin and cast-off men's clothes, and placed on pedestals around the wall of the tent. The figure designed to represent BURDELL, lay on a dirty blanket at the feet of his spouse, and looked horrible enough, heaven knows, with face and shirt daubed all over with brown paint, the eyes glaring, and a dagger sticking in his bosom. The sheep, a poor, half-starved creature, lay helplessly on one side on the grass, with its fourth leg sowed up, I suppose in a borrowed skin.

So much for the wax-works. Of other amusements there was no lack. Merry-go-rounds, perpendicular and horizontal were whirling round about, and up and down, at a tremendous rate, and seemed to give great pleasure to their patrons, of whom not a few were people whose childhood's years terminated at least twenty-five years ago. Looking at them, I thought of that innocent amusement of the venerable Chinamen—kite-flying—in which, it is said, they indulge with all the ardor of youth, all the perseverance of middle life, and all the thoughtfulness of age. But there are other recreations to be found here, not just so innocent as these. I have discovered, stowed away in remote corners, attentive groups surrounding thimble-riggers and dice-throwers, and boys betting the meagre hoardings of a twelvemonth with the same anxiety as to the result as if thousands hung upon it. As for the inner man, ample provision has been made in every quarter. Fair Haven oysters, ice-cream, and the more substantial fares of roast and boiled are to be had in plenty, and may be washed down with pop, root-beer, or soda-water, at one's pleasure. No strong

During the evening I invested another fifteen cents in obtaining admission to the dramatic performances at Hampden Hall. I have not stated the fact exactly. The advertised price of admission was fifteen cents, "to suit the times." When I approached the box-office I found it surrounded by a number of young gentlemen, who appeared to be piteously appealing to the sympathies of the ticket-seller, in the hope of being admitted free. They might as well have wasted their entreaties on a "stock or stone." I pushed past them to the door-keeper—who afterwards appeared as the manager and a leading actor—and gave him a quarter. He searched his pockets long and anxiously, but was at last forced to declare that he had only five cents about him. So I took the five, and went in. It would take too long to describe the scenic arrangements, the audience, the performance or the actors. All smelt of the barn, except a few curious spirits, drawn thither, like myself, to spend the time. The star was a Mr. JONAH GLUBB, that inimitable impersonator of "Yankee character." He indulged in some pretty broad allusions, tumbled head foremost and heels over head, several times, and once asked the osseous looking lady who represented his mother, "What has become of that 'ere dog's tail, mother? has it been cutted off, or drawed in?" I waited to the end of the first piece—(it was one of three)—in the hope of seeing a grand broad-sword combat, but was disappointed. As to the merits of the play itself, it was beneath contempt. A gentleman in the room adjoining, has been keeping me awake sufficiently long to conclude this letter. It is questionable whether its readers would wish to be placed in the same predicament. My neighbor's companion has at last grown out of all patience. He shouts irritably, "Oh, for God's sake, stop that." The snoring subsides, and so do I.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON

Dreadful catastrophe! The rain is pouring down in torrents, and promises no cessation to-day. The city is a mass of dark, heavy, impenetrable clouds; the streets are covered with slush, and the hotels are crowded with dripping, reeking, smoking victims of the weather. Nothing has been done on the course to-day, and the fear is that nothing can be done to-morrow either. If, however, the day should prove fine, the programme will be followed out to completion, so that the proceedings set down for Friday will be taken up on Saturday. The grand banquet will be held to-morrow, at any rate.

By the way, the rain, has done one good thing. It has washed down the holy posters. How delighted I was when I saw them drop into the street—when I saw them basely trampled on by people going up and down—when, finally, I saw them swept into the gutter from which they will never emerge!

Gloria Hallelujerum!

Later.—The night is clear and dry, and promises a fine day to-morrow. I have just peeped in at the Promenade Concert and Ball in the City Hall. Nothing could be finer. Here let me put on record imperishable as the TIMES, my admiration—(I and almost written adoration)—of the ladies of Sprinfield. The young ones are lovely; the old ones—well, "handsome is that handsome does."

FRIDAY—4 P. M.

The day has been gorgeous, the grounds thronged; the spectators stand is one blazing surface of beauty. Half the ladies were unable to procure seats, and are wandering disconsolately through the grounds. Poor things, how I pity them. In the morning I witnessed one of WM. RAREY's horse-taming experiments, but as every gentleman present bound himself by a written pledge not to expose the modus operandi, under pain of forfeiting $300, I cannot go into details. The system is based on two principles: 1st. To make the horse sensible of your superiority; 2d., of your kindness; in other words, to teach him that man is both his master and his friend.

The attempt was proximately successful, but not entirely so, because the time was very limited.

Here, while I think of it, I wish to express my acknowledgments to Mr. BLISS, the President of the Exhibition, and all the other officers whom I have met, for their unvarying courtesy and considerate attentions. Warrener's Hotel, too, is a comfortable place; the charges and the waiters are both fair, only that the latter are not so numerous as they are good.

The dinner takes place this evening, and promises to be a very grand affair.

[BY TELEGRAPH]

SPRINGFIELD, Thursday, Sept. 16.

It has rained here powerfully all day, and all the proceedings of the exhibition have been at a stand. Mr. W. H. RAREY had an exhibition of his skill, in taming a horse which no one has been able to ride. He accomplished his undertaking to the delight of an assembly of gentlemen, and the groom, whom the horse had previously thrown with great violence, rode him quietly to the stable. The weather is now fair, and the exhibition will proceed to-morrow, and be concluded on Saturday. According to the original plan, this evening a brilliant promenade concert and ball have taken place at the City Hall, attracting a large number of citizens and strangers.

A spirited meeting was held this afternoon for the expression of views touching the improvement of horses, at which Mr. DAVID LEAVITT, of Great Barrington, presided. Speeches were made by Messrs. ZADOCK PRATT, the Rev. JAS. DRUMMOND, of this city, SOLON ROBINSON and L. B. BROWN, of New-York, and several others.

All the hotels are full and running over with guests, and everything promises a still larger crowd to-morrow. Another trial of speed will take place to-morrow, between Ethan Allen and Hiram Drew, and much interest is felt in the event. The exercises will continue throughout the week, closing on Saturday afternoon.

FRIDAY, Sept. 17—P. M.

There is little or no change in the demand or rates for Money. The market is generally easy to the borrower, both on first-class collateral, on demand, and on approved short paper. The Customs-receipts to-day are $126,000, and there was also a payment of $200,000 into the Sub-Treasury for account of one of the Washington bidders for the late loan. The disbursements are $143,605. The Specie balances this afternoon in the Government Office stand $12,543,034. French bills are easier for the steamer to-morrow; sales from 5f. 15@5f.12½ to the dollar. Sterling keeps firm though not active, 109⅞@110 ₩ cent. The remittances in Bullion, positively engaged, are $300,000, and they may reach $450,000—a reported shipment of $150,000 being somewhat uncertain at the moment. The Fulton sails at noon to-morrow. The Persia's mail, delivered this morning, is, financially, of a quiet and satisfactory tone. The letters to the Illinois Central Company are more encouraging. The shares had recovered in London to 77 ₩ cent., and the heavy stockholders were rapidly paying in the late assessment. The Grain advices are also good, and trade in Cotton Goods at Manchester not going on actively.

Among the passengers who came out by the Persia, is Mr. JAMES CAIRD, member of Parliament from Dartmouth, the well-known statistician of British Agriculture. This is Mr. C.'s first visit to the United States, and we understand that he proceeds at once on a tour through the great Wheat and Corn growing districts of the North west.

The Stock Exchange is again quite alive to-day, and the turn is now in favor of the Bull account, the rather rapid decline of yesterday and the few days preceding, have brought forward fresh and more confident buyers. This was not wholly unexpected, after the downward movement of yesterday; though prices are still unsettled, and the recovery of the market on several of the Railway Stocks is still resisted by the speculators on the other side. The liveliest demonstration on their part to-day, was against Reading. They got the command yesterday of about 3,000 shares cash stock by paying a liberal bonus for the use of the stock, 30 to 60 days, and this parcel was precipitated on the market at the early Board, the price opening at 47, and selling down to 45⅞@46. Subsequently a strong demand set in, on the true character of the movement being discovered, and, in sympathy with the recovery in other stocks, the price advanced to 46⅝@47@46⅝ ₩ cent. New-York Central found good buyers at 78. Rock Island, after a continued downward course through the week, turned, and sold freely at 68@68⅛@68 ₩ cent. Galena sold at 83 ₩ cent., and 82½ seller's option. The receipts of the road the first week in September are understood to reach $48,000, at which rate the road should take about $200,000 for the month. The shares of Michigan Southern were firm, and Cleveland and Toledo steady. A further advance of 2½ ₩ cent. was had on Pacific Mail the cash bid at the close being about 95 ₩ cent. Panama 113 ₩ cent. State Stocks were steady, and City Bank shares firm. The little that was done in Railway Bonds was at steady rates. The general market at the close looked well for a further recovery in prices, the fine Autumnal weather and good news from abroad contributing to this change for the better. In reference to the movement against Reading shares, the impression on the Street now is that the short interest has been heavily increased since the decline from 48@49 ₩ cent.

It affords us pleasure to record that the earnings of the Ohio and Mississippi Road for August show a very decided improvement upon the previous Summer months, and go ahead even of last season. We also learn that Mr. TROTTER, the London commissioner from the foreign holders of the First Mortgage, is in a fair way to adjust the July interest, which was unexpectedly defaulted upon.

The Treasurer makes the following statement showing the business of the Road for the month of August:

	1858.	1857.
Passenger earning	$83,635 32	$91,108 13
Freight	58 500 50	35,865 19
Total	$142,135 82	$126,270 06
Increase		$15,270 63

He states that the earnings would have been from thirty to forty ₩ cent. greater had the rates of last year prevailed.

The business on the Michigan Central for August, was as follows:

	1858.	1857.
Passengers	$89,060 99	$126,839 03

Miscellaneous	5,998 74	6,295 78
Total	$176,060 32	$321,353 98

And on the Pennsylvania Central as follows:

The Cincinnati Gazette remarks as follows upon the reported negotiation in London by the Atlantic and Great Western Road:

> "It seems, after all, that our suspicions with reference to the reported negotiation for $3,000,000, in London and Paris, for the Atlantic and Ohio Railroad Co., were well founded. The negotiation, it appears, is not yet concluded, and it may safely be added, we think, that it will hardly prove successful. The chief aim of parties connected with this scheme has been to humbug the public. There is a motive for this that may be inferred from the fact that suits are now pending against various parties who subscribed for stock when the Company was first organized, but subsequently repudiated the subscriptions on the ground of fraud. The amount involved in these suits is in the aggregate two or three hundred thousand dollars.
>
> It is important, of course, for the plaintiffs in these cases to make it appear that the road is to be built. It was therefore announced a year ago that the work would be completed in four months from that time. This report having proved false, it was again positively asserted that a contract for the iron had been concluded, and that the rails were in course of shipment from England. This information also proved unreliable. Lastly and lately the public have been advised of the successful negotiation of a $3,000,000 loan—the absolute purchase of 31,000 tons of iron, and the actual receipt in New-York of half a million of dollars, being part of the cash proceeds of the negotiation. How much truth there is in this last report may be inferred from the following statement, copied from the NEW-YORK TIMES of Friday.
>
>
> * * At this rate the road would have a paper debt when completed, of over $30,000,000. But, of course, it never would be completed. The proceeds of this loan, ($2,100,000,) with whatever might be scraped up from stockholders at the end of pending law suits, would be used mainly in paying existing debts, when the work would come to a stand, unless foreign capitalists should feel disposed to contribute $9,000,000 more in cash or its equivalent.

Mr. E. F. SATTERTHWAITE, London, in his weekly circular by the Persia, advises the English holders of Illinois Central Stock that:

> "It will be observed that the amount of bonds cancelled is $819,000; and, as the Company propose to issue dividend scrip to the amount of 5 ₩ cent. on the ordinary stock, when bonds to that amount have been canceled, it is probable that this measure will soon be carried into effect. On this account, we cannot too urgently recommend all our friends to see that the stock they hold is registered in their own names at once, as there may be some difficulty in collecting the dividend from stock registered in other names."

The same advice is applicable to the American holders. The Scrip dividend will represent about $870,000 realized from the collections on the Land Sales, to which amount the mortgages upon the estate of the Company will have been collected by October. It is probable that this dividend Scrip will hereafter be received or written off as an installment upon the Stock; thus being made to the extent of 5 ₩ cent., a guaranty against future cash assessments.

Western Stocks and Money at Cincinnati.

From Heuson & Holmes' Circular.

In our last issue, we noticed the existence of a more animated feeling for both Bonds and Stock; this state of things has continued during the two weeks last past, and we to-day quote increased sales, and, in most instances, at better rates. The very large amount of business now crowding upon most Western Roads, and the reports made public of a large ₩ cent. increase in gross earnings, together with a more economical management, and a consequent decrease in running expenses, all serve to inspire renewed confidence and strongly attract the attention of capitalists to investments of this character. We note sales of Covington and Lexington second mortgage 7s at 45@46¼, being an advance of 1¼ ₩ cent.; 3d mortgages of same Road at 30; Ohio and Mississippi 2d mortgage Construction Bonds at 20; Hamilton and Dayton 7 ₩ cent. 2d mortgage at 74, and the 1st mortgages of same Company at 88; Little Miami 6s at 83½, an advance of ½ ₩ cent.; Cincinnati 6s at 81; Ind. Central 10 ₩ cent. 2d mortgage at 75; Indianapolis and Cincinnati 7 ₩ cent. 2d mortgarge at 75; Columbus and Xenia Dividend Scrip, due in 1862, at 90, and Ohio and Mississippi 1st mortgage bonds at 50. In Stocks, a greater advance has been established, with sales of Little Miami shares at 79; Columbus and Xenia at 77; Indianapolis and Cincinnati at 40, an advance of 3½ ₩ cent; Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton at 45; Ohio and Mississippi, 4½; Washington Insurance Company, 100; Cincinnati Insurance Company, 95; Firemen's, 120; Farmers' Bank, Kentucky, 120, and Cincinnati Gas and Coke Company, 120. All of these quotations show a satisfactory advance over prices noted in our last circular. The Money market has been abundantly supplied with both currency and Exchange; rates of interest have generally favored borrowers. The market for Eastern Exchange has declined, and we quote sight on New-York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore at par to ⅛ premium buying, and ¼ premium, selling rates. Rates on New-Orleans are nominal at ⅛ discount to ⅛ premium. Gold is in good demand at ¼ premium.

The Turkish Loan in London.

From the Correspondent of the Commercial.

LONDON, Sept. 3, 1858.

The adjudication of the new Turkish loan of $15,000,000 has been the chief subject of excitement in the London Money market during the past three days. The matter has assumed all the character of a virulent contest, in which financial susceptibilities and political animosities are alike mixed up. The Greek merchants in London and Constantinople are the great gainers by the ruinous condition of the Turkish finances. By the fluctuations in the value of the inconvertible paper currency, which of course depends upon the extent to which the issues are diminished or increased from time to time, they have long made enormous profits; and as the object of the loan is to redeem this debased circulation, and reëstablish the credit of the Porte, it has of course been a point of vital interest to them to prevent at any cost its success. They have been defeated, but the battle has been a severe one, involving mutual loss. The Greek merchants are among the most active speculators on the London Stock Exchange, and therefore know well how to work upon that body. Directly the loan was announced, they put in circulation every conceivable rumor to damage it. Three days was the time allowed for persons to send in applications. Meanwhile the quotation at the commencement was 1 premium. Seeing this, the Greeks commenced an uninterrupted series of sales, till on the last day for making up the lists, they had driven the price down to par, so that there was no inducement for any one to subscribe. The public nevertheless looked favorably on the proposals, and were not deterred from entertaining them. At the final hour it was found the total applications, accompanied by a deposit of 5 ₩ cent., amounted to more than $20,000,000, being $5,000,000 in excess of the sum required. The loan is in 6 ₩ cent. bonds at 85, secured by a special lien on the customs duties of Constantinople. The previous Turkish loan, secured by the Egyptian tribute, stands now at 55½, and was at one time as high as 104. Yet when that was introduced, four years since, the same tactics were pursued to crush it, and it was with difficulty placed upon the market at 80. In both cases the fact of their having been carried through is to be attributed entirely to the tone adopted by the London Press. The principal journals, writing in the general interests of commerce, exposed the interested nature of the combination against the contractors, and have induced the public to come forward. A word of discouragement from them would have been fatal, more especially as ROTHSCHILDS and BARINGS, who are illpleased whenever a loan is brought out by any house than themselves, were by no means disposed to assist it. ROTHSCHILDS indeed are said to have operated largely on the adverse side. It is believed that during the three subscription days the speculative sales were to the extent of $2,000,000 or $3,000,000. According to some reports the Greek firms at starting supplied $500,000 to a mutual fund to cover all the risk of their operations. Under these circumstances the loan must be expected to be heavy for some little time, and to day it has touched ¾ discount, closing at ½ discount. It will most likely, however, soon get entirely into the hands of permanent holders and experience a steady rise. Such a result can scarcely be avoided, since in all material respects it is just as good as the old 6 ₩ cent. loan, now quoted in the market 12 ₩ cent. higher. The subscribers to the present $15,000,000 have the option of taking $10,000,000 more at the same terms on the 10th of next month.
